CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—This has been the quietest day of all since the great fire, which this night a week ago was sweeping through this city, and people were flying in distant terror before the flames. Every day since then there has been full of feverish excitement and activity. All were endeavoring to see if something could not be saved from the wreck. The natural despair of the first day was succeeded by hopes which from the citizens on the north, Today was generally been one of scattered inactivity and relaxation. There have been services in most of the principal churches, and in all the themes were, of course, the great calamity. The general tone of the Chicago pulpit has been an hopeful one for the future, and the wonderful buoyancy of Chicago has been as marked in its religious temples as in its marts of trade, now existing in the ruins of the West Side. A singular announcement was made in connection with the following notice, that Dr. COLLYER would not his congregation in the ashes of his church. There was practically no Sabbath on the North Side. Hundreds were engaged in putting up shanties in district which from the effects of Winter, of which the temperature of today was sharp reminder. Thus far some 300 of these impudent dwellings have been put up or been ordered, and the city a few days hence Chicago will closely resemble the temporary towns which marked the progress of the Pullman Railroad. It is required that these shanties shall not be more one story high, and the requirement is generally obeyed, but I saw that which were two stories high, in several cases, while the father was building the third, the mother and children were gathered near by arranging remnants of household goods saved from the flames ready to be placed in the new domicile when finished. Only a few hours are required to complete these make-shifts for dwellings. I saw just now a mother washing by five small wailing children under a shed quickly engaged in cooking their morning meal of food, furnished by a generous nation, while a shattered stove picked up somewhere amidst the ruins. Scenes like this can be encountered at every step, and daily better than anything else how complete is the wreck of this people. On the South Side far different scenes were to be found. Being mostly unscathed, it was naturally the resort of the curious, and was thronged throughout the day by gazing crowds. The majority of these were pedestrians, but many were Chicagoans in every kind of vehicle going slowly over the desolated area. More priority crowds were never seen anywhere. The ruins were so impressive as to prevent even loud conversation. There was no discordant anywhere, and the office of Gen. SHERIDAN has been of eminence. The question of the people now is want of water, but the waterworks authorities have made that it will be ready for use by Wednesday, for by that time the great engine, with pumping capacity of 30,000,000 gallons per day, will be in working order. Before the fire Chicago required 45,000,000 gallons per day, but it is estimated that 15 will not now require more than 10,000,000, so that this one engine will be ample, and for use allow abundant water for the working of the smaller engines of more powerful construction, these replacements. No doubt of this point can be made by Wednesday, for it certainly will be working a week. The want of light in the remainder of the South Side left will be felt for many weeks, as all connections with gas mains in the burnt districts are open, and even if the gas works were not injured, the necessary repairs would require much time. The services on the West Side is intact, which fact alone will be enough to drive business to that part of the city, despite the opposition of those who fear that it is some years temporarily the South Side will not be possible. The Legislature meets to-morrow, and will probably promptly pass the measures of relief I mentioned yesterday. The city, with this help, expects to speedily recuperate; but as no money is asked beyond three millions spent for canals, it is not easy to say how much can be done. R. C.

Services in the Ruins of Churches—The Dead—The Local Insurance Companies.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—It appears that services were held in the ruins of the following churches in the afternoon, and were thought to be very impressive by those attending them: St. James' Protestant Episcopal, Cass-street, Rev. HUGH MILLER THOMPSON; Unitarian, North Dearborn-street, Rev. ROBERT COLLYER; St. Paul's Universalist, Wabash-avenue, Rev. W. H. RYDER.

Thus far 136 bodies of human victims have been found in the ruins, and inquests held on them by the Coroner. In nearly every case the remains are unrecognizable, and remain unidentified. Very little attention is paid to this phase of the disaster, and there is none of which it is so difficult to obtain details. The bare figures of the number of victims are considered sufficient to satisfy the public on this head, and very little else can be had except by the accident of being present when remains are found or casually meeting those who were. One such I encountered who described sixty-four bodies as nothing but charred masses of flesh, to which it was impossible to distinguish the least resemblance to human features.

MAYOR MASON has issued the following:

Famine are being issued by the Relief Committee to the utterly destitute, to all points in the United States where such persons can find work and shelter. All persons will hereafter be aided by GEO. H. PULLMAN, Chairman, and countersigned by agents appointed by each of the railroads which receive them here. Roads forming parts of lines leading from Chicago are respectfully requested to notify the Chairman of the Committee of their willingness to honor such passes. (Signed,) R. B. MASON, Mayor.

A furious gale prevailed in this city last night. It became almost a hurricane by midnight, but subsided before morning. It caused much alarm to the citizens, especially to those residing in the vicinity of the burnt city. Fire-brands were blown in every direction. Skeleton walls were prostrated, shaking buildings in the vicinity from foundation to apex. The astonishment and alarm was shapely loss than on the night of the great disaster, fortunately it had rained for twenty-four hours previous, thus preventing any conflagration as a result of the tornado. The Sabbath has been generally in a marked manner in all the churches left standing. In many instances two and three congregations of different denominations have worshiped in the same edifice at different hours.

The announcement can now be safely made that the insurance companies of Chicago, taken altogether, will not be able to pay more than five cents on the dollar, and some of them will not even do so much. R. C.

The Condition of the Insurance Companies.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 12.—The Pacific Insurance Company hear the heaviest losses by the Chicago fire among the California companies. The Company have made arrangements to pay all their losses immediately, and continue their business. Their original capital of $1,000,000, is unimpaired.

BUFFALO, Oct. 15.—The announcement was made here last night that the National Insurance Company, of Boston, yesterday subscribed to the guarantee fund sufficient to cover all their Chicago and other losses.

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 15.—The Putnam Fire Insurance Company, of this city, have just received information from their general agent at Chicago, and announce that the Company must suspend business. The officers are attempting to organize another company with a new capital to take its place immediately, with a good prospect of success.

The Banks to Reopen on Tuesday.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—A meeting of the officers of the National Banks of Chicago was held on Sunday evening, for the purpose of conferring with Mr. HULBURD, Controller of Currency. E. IRVING PRATHER, President of the Third National Bank, occupied the chair. HENRY GREENBAUM, of the German National Bank, Secretary. A full exchange of views touching the condition of Chicago banks as affected by the fire was had. It was ascertained upon comparison of liabilities and resources, that all the banks were perfectly sound, and should resume business at once. The only delay asked by any of the banks was for sufficient time to convey their safes from the ruins to new places of business, and to arrange their books and office furniture. After considerable discussion, in which the Controller participated, a resolution, heretofore passed, to pay fifteen per cent. cash immediately, was unanimously rescinded, and a resolution adopted to open for regular transaction of business at 10 A. M. on the 17th inst.

The following address has been issued:

To the Public:

Having ascertained, from personal investigation, that the national banks of Chicago are solvent institutions, and that, notwithstanding the late fire, they are able and ready to pay all just claims on presentation, I hereby announce that the national banks of Chicago will open their doors for the transaction of business on Tuesday, the 17th instant, at 10 A. M., and I tender my belief in their ability to meet all their legitimate engagements on demand.

(Signed,) H. R. HULBURD,
Controller of Currency.

A Detailed Description of the Great Fire—Its Origin, Progress and Final End—History of the City—The Work of Rebuilding the Business Portion.

From a Special Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Friday, Oct. 13, 1871.

It is my purpose to give, in a connected form, the events that have transpired in Chicago within the past week. With the visitation and its loss, is to be handed down the story of recovery already commenced, and Chicago herself may live longest to startle her own children with the experiences that are yet fresh in her people of today. Let me tell in the simplest phrases what happened in Chicago in the thirty-six hours following Sunday, Oct. 8, at 1½ A. M. A prelude to these occurrences came in the form of a disaster like in kind. It is only one of the wonderful features of the visitation, that the burning of ten loosely-built squares on Canal and Clinton streets, from Van Buren-street north to Adams-street, should now be accepted as a merciful interposition. For had not this razed track, freshly swept of its lumber manufactories and cheap frame shops and tenements, intervened, the fire of twenty-four hours' later would have been far increased in magnitude.

HISTORY OF CHICAGO.

A few words as to the topography of Chicago. Their necessity is abridged by the circumstance that the disaster has brought the Chicago city map into the hands of nearly every reader. Chicago occupies a level plain, the shore of Lake Michigan, at that point, running nearly north and south. From the north-west and south-west, but gradually becoming nearly parallel to the lake shore, the north branch and the south branch of the Chicago River come at right angles to a junction, as the main channel, three-quarters of a mile from the shore, whence it flows due east into the lake. By this natural barrier the city is divided into three sections, known as the North Division, the South Division and the West Division. Parting at this point with the question of population, it may be stated as follows: North Division 75,000, West Division 150,000, South Division 100,000, making up the total of 300,000 shown in the recent elaborate Edward's census. As to the features of development shaped in the first thirty years' growth of the city, early settlement began about old Fort Dearborn, on the lake shore, one of the log structures of which had survived to pass away in the great conflagration. When the fear of Indian outrages passed away, business moved westward toward the fork of the river, outside the Government reservation bounded by State-street. The North Side had, in 1836, its early stage of ambition which had left the Lake House and a few old-time brick structures, of a pretentious class in their day, along North Water and Kinzie streets, parallel to the river. Twenty-five years ago, however, the question was settled for all time, originally by common consent, but since solidly confirmed by the location of the railway termini, that the region from the river southward along the lake shore, constituting the upper portion of the South Division should be the business heart of Chicago, its southern line moving southward with the spread of improvements. Here were, therefore, the Custom-house and Post-office, the Court-house, the Chamber of Commerce, the great hotels, commencing with the Tremont of 1850, and ending the era before the Great Fire with the nearly completed magnificent Pacific Hotel. To the leading centres thus grouped in the South Division, building had responded on a scale and with a display of taste and lavishness that had charmed every visitor. It is easy to enumerate in the section north of Jackson and bounded by Lasalle-street on the west, 200 buildings and blocks in Athens marble, Ohio free-stone, Marquette red-stone, or with cast-iron fronts, the total of whose actual cost adds to the columns of the loss $38,000,000. These were the buildings that gave their character to Lasalle, Dearborn and State streets, and Wabash-avenue, running south; and Lake, Randolph, Washington, Monroe and Adams, running east and west. The improvements of the best business portions of the north and west side reflected, but at somewhat modest distance, a like development. It will be conceded by all visitors to Chicago that Lasalle-street, before her visitation of desolation, had a larger number of costly office buildings than Wall-street, and that the stores of Lake-street, State-street and Wabash-avenue would muster as first-class on Broadway. Many of these costly buildings had taken the place of the cheap frame structures of the prairie settlement, without any intermediate improvement. Had Chicago adopted the policy fifteen years ago of having every frame building within city limits perish or pass away on its original site, the rest of this account need never have been written. She allowed them to be massed in solid squares in the heart of the city, on the cheaper real estate along the river. Ten compact squares of crumbling wooden rookeries were packed into the area west of Lasalle-street, between Madison and Van Buren streets) as the slums and purlieus of misery and vice. Along the south branch of the river, on both sides, were extensive coal and lumber yards, and near the latter, in the West Division, was to be found a line of large planing-mills, box manufactories and cabinet shops, most of them frame, dividing the area with frame dwellings and small frame blocks. We have characterized sufficiently for our purpose the business heart of the city in the South Division, and its contiguous source of peril on its south-west. It remains to speak of the North Division. Two parallel streets, Clark and Wells, both bridged streets at the main river, were retail streets and beer-shops, the quarter being largely occupied by the foreign element from the continent of Europe. West of Wells and following the meander of the north branch, the North Division had numerous large manufactories and distilleries. The north side works of the Chicago Gas Company were here. East of Clark, save in the lower blocks along the river traversed by the tracks of the North-western Railway to the great McCormick Reaper Works and the extensive lumber-yards on the sands near the light-house, all was given up to residences, much of it handsomely built, generally in detached houses, some of them occupying an entire square. At Chicago-avenue, on the immediate lake shore region, were several great breweries. Here also were the Chicago Water-works, taking the supply from the famous lake tunnel. At this point began the elegant residences of the north lake shore. West of Lincoln Park, along Clark-street, and for two miles above Division-street to Fullerton-avenue, extended the close residence quarter of the North Division. Many of the houses were costly, multitudes were elegant, and to a larger degree than any similar extent of residence quarter in any other city in the world, the houses of the North Division possessed this character, that they were owned by their occupants.

Any one who has followed this brief description is prepared to understand the extent and nature of the visitation which in sixteen hours totally obliterated the homes and places of business of nearly one hundred thousand people, destroyed the heart of the city, and visited upon a single community, and through them, upon all the money centres of the world, a loss of over two hundred millions of dollars. The protracted drouth that, through months of Summer and early Autumn had given no rain-fall, had prepared the material for the conflagration.

COMMENCEMENT OF THE FIRE.

Everything combustible was as dry as tinder, and we have shown the tinder unwisely accumulated in the heart of the city, in the Wells and Market-street region of the South Division. An insignificant cause was the spark that set fire to the train. A cow kicks over a lamp in a shanty on DeKoven-street at 9½ o'clock on this Sunday evening. The straw is in a blaze, the shanty follows the cow-shed, and the great fire is begun. The citizens of Chicago have had cause for pride in their Fire Department. Success in extinguishing fires had bred a sense of security in the firemen, and their appliances. So from 9½ o'clock until past midnight the West Side fire was fought by the Chicago Fire Department without attracting attention or exciting alarm on the South Side, and citizens in all Divisions went to bed content to get the particulars in the Monday morning papers. All accounts agree that until about 1 o'clock quiet reigned in the principal streets in the heart of the city, lined with the great hotels and tall business blocks, given up largely to lodging-rooms above. But then a new phase occurred. A south-west gale had arisen strong and steady, at times almost of hurricane force, and had not long been pouring its shower of sparks and brands into the wooden blocks on the east side of the river before a new alarm broke out in that quarter. A detachment of the Fire Department was hurried to a fresh scene of action. The wind rose in power. The flames went through the close-ranged rickety frame buildings as if they were a thicket of dry reeds. In twenty minutes fifty were on fire. In half an hour a sheet of flame was leaping along the entire front of several squares, the force of wind and flame detaching large blazing fragments. This was at 2 o'clock. So rapid was the progress of the flames that many lives were lost in this first stage of the calamity east of the river. Then alarm began in earnest. In an incredibly short period Lasalle-street was reached and passed. The wind rose to a hurricane. The humbler buildings in the path of the fire disappeared like snow-wreaths, and due north-easterly went the destroyer, into the very heart of the city. The Pacific Hotel fell early. From the low buildings opposite on Lasalle-street the flames leaped through its windows and filled its six stories with flame.

The opposition of the Fire Department practically ended at this period of the destruction. The tall buildings on Lasalle and Dearborn streets, the Court-house, the Bridges, Sherman and Tremont—their inmates happily warned in time—went into ruins. Several accounts of eye-witnesses agree that the flames seemed to be impelled forward as with the force of a blow-pipe. There was little smoke, as the clean and whitened ruins attest. Says Gen. Cosby, who was one of the last guests to leave the Tremont House: "Occasionally the wind would detach a vast body of flame that would leave the general mass and hurl it far ahead." No form of building or building material withstood it. It was tempest and tornado and furnace combined. The track of the fire held straight on in the direction of the gale, until Lake-street, South Water and the river had been crossed, and through the eastern residence section of the North Side, until the fact was realized that puzzled the readers of the first alarming despatches. The water-works, one mile northeast of the Court-house, on the lake shore, were burned, kindled by live embers in its saloon roof, and destroyed by the same fire that a few hours before began a mile and a-half south-west of the Court-house, in the West Division. The fire which had thus cut its broad belt north-westerly across the city, at first spread laterally with comparative slowness. But now arose a new and astounding phase of the conflagration. The gale seemed to take on the aspects of a whirlwind, or series of whirlwinds, and on both sides of its earliest established course, flung out the flames.

PROGRESS OF THE FLAMES.

At 3 o'clock A. M., or after the water-works on Chicago-avenue had been burned, the Tribune building was believed safe. Then, as stated, new currents of the wind set in, and State-street was reached by flames blown due east. It is believed that very many lodgers in the upper floors of business blocks perished unawakened by the noise in the streets. From the hotels, however, every guest escaped, and joined the mass of human beings that poured through the streets and avenues. Many came from homes in the North and West Divisions to rescue their property in the stores and banks. Many, driven into the heart of the city, sought escape down the streets leading to the lake shore. Hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of merchandise was heaped in the Lake Shore Park, east of Michigan-avenue. When the shift of the wind threw the flames due east upon the lake shore as Madison-street, and from the squares below, the goods thus stored were burned as they lay.

Meanwhile the entire upper portion of the South Division had been filling with a havoc of flame, that finally spared only the Lind Block of five stores, standing detached on the west side of Market, north of Randolph-street. The bridges across the main river at Wells, Clark, State and Rush streets had given way, and cast their embers into the stream, cutting off the retreat that had first begun northward. The North Division was now thoroughly in flames all along the river, and the flames were moving northward.

There could be no organized attempt to check a fire that sent its messengers of destruction hundreds of feet in advance of the main column. Buildings were fired above Chicago-avenue from buildings three squares southward. The fugitives were scorched with live cinders, horses and men fell and died in the streets, wagons of rescued property were burned, the drivers barely escaping with their lives. Families moved some of them four times to escape destruction; several were known to have been burned in shelter; the rest only found safe refuge in the woods of Lincoln Park. Even thither the rain of fire followed them. The visitor today sees among the scarred and blasted trees the remains of rich furniture and carpets, a piano-frame burned out of its case; the remnants of gilt picture-frames, and charred tapestry carpets, and many humbler household goods. To the branches of a tree clings the carcass of a cat, the poor animal overtaken and roasted in its last retreat. Multitudes passed the afternoon and night of that awful Monday in the waters of the lake, keeping their apparel wet by dipping beneath the surface. On Monday night, a rain, dismal enough under ordinary circumstances of like exposure, came gratefully down upon an army of from 60,000 to 90,000 fugitives from the houses of the North Division. The beautiful homes of Pine and Rush streets and the hovels of the Kingsbury tract and the Patch, had met a common fate.

THE FIRE ENDED.

Thursday, the third day after the fire, was clear, bright and cloudless. The wind had died away, and I rode over the whole area of the disaster. There was no smoke or sign of remaining fire save in the great burning coal heaps along the river, or where mountains of smouldering grain were all that remained of the destroyed elevators. The fierceness of the flame had burned up everything combustible, and swept away the ashes as fast as consumed. The piles of crumbled masonry, hundreds of acres in extent, were even free from smoke stains. The streets were free enough to allow me to drive unimpeded. The Court-house is the most imposing ruin. Generally the larger structures are flat with the ground. The Sherman House debris are shapeless almost level. So is all that remains of FIELD & LEITER'S white marble store. The Pacific Hotel walls are one-third down, the interior totally burned out. The following costly buildings were designed to be fire-proof: The Republic Life Insurance Company's building, NIXON'S adjoining unfinished building, First National Bank, the Safe Depository, the Tribune building. Only NIXON'S remains, it having been exposed to far less heat than the others. The rest are ruined. The late busy corners are almost undistinguishable, and old citizens contest the point as to whether this is Lake or Randolph, that Clark or Dearborn, until some familiar recovered land-mark decides it. The only route to the North Division is across Lake-street to the West Side, where we cross the North Branch at Indiana-street, and drive northward three miles. We ride the whole distance on the raised grade of the Fullerton pavement, across a bare, treeless, vacant plain, and as we near Wright's Grove, we look southward and see from where we stand in our vehicle, the first and nearest unburned structure, the Wabash-avenue Methodist Church at Harrison-street, nearly four miles away. The elegant frame villa of MARION D. OGDEN, in its wooden enclosure of an entire square, the groceries and wooden out-houses, is alone unharmed, an oasis in a wide desert. From the burned tract of nearly two hundred square, every trace of combustion and combustible has disappeared. Even the turf burned up and its ashes blew away, leaving the naked soil.

The city will be rebuilt better than before. It will be a handsomer and a safer city than it could ever have been without this fire, but its purchase money strikes at the money centres of the world. Recuperation has already commenced, but it began in Chicago on Tuesday, in a city from which every public building, every newspaper, every power-press, all leading hotels, all but one wholesale store, eighteen churches, two great railway depot structures, six of its bridges, six large elevators, fifty vessels, and sixteen thousand dwellings had disappeared total y. A Walk Among the Ruins—Remarkable Sights and Scenes—How the Burned District Looks.

From a Special Correspondent.

CHICAGO, Friday, Oct. 13, 1871.

Never was presented a more mournful scene as last night I walked through the desolate ruins of the South Division of this city. Starting from the hotel at the corner of Michigan-avenue and Congress, which marks the route of the devouring flames, I passed through Congress-street to State, through State to Madison and thence to the West Division. In my front and on the left were lurid flames rising from the great beds of coal along the banks of the river, and here and there among the ruins were little patches of flame, blue or red, where apparently solid granite had break were yet ablaze. From all these flames arose a baneful light that dragged the ruins from the shadows of the night and made every ragged remnant of a wall seem a monument of general desolation. And these remnants were by no means few. Stout walls of granite had been blistered and cracked by the fierce heat, but portions of many yet stood erect amid the ruins. As far as the eye could reach on every side in the red light of the distant coal fields was a chaos of smouldering fire. In the silence and solitude came a sense of desolation no other cause could cause.

If the ruins are weirdly grand by night, it is only by day that a correct idea of the destruction which has been wrought can be obtained. The strong light of day enables the eye to reach for miles on every side, only to view the wreck of what last week was a busy hive of commerce. Imagine an area of 2,500 acres covered with heaps of bricks and ashes, with here and there the remnants of a wall yet erect to tell more plainly the story of destruction. An area four miles long, by an average of three-quarters of a mile wide, with not a house left standing. In this space was the bulk of the wealth which Chicago had accumulated. Stately buildings devoted to commerce art, literature and science, covered a part of this territory. Never was wreck so complete. There is an amazing absence of debris, for the fire seems to have literally swallowed all these huge masses, leaving nothing behind but heaps of ashes and a few shreps of iron. I had expected to find the streets encumbered with huge masses of bricks, iron, and other refuse, but found them almost entirely clear, and nowhere so blocked as to be impassable for vehicles. It seemed as if the fire devoured the buildings so rapidly that only insignificant fragments fell to the ground, and I can readily believe the statement that the flames spread from block to block faster than a man could walk. But complete as is the destruction in the South Division, it is as nothing compared with that in the North Division. There, with one exception, every thing is leveled even with the streets. Not a timber remains, nor one single brick in its place. The one exception is another marvel of this great conflagration, as it is a frame house that was in the midst of the fire, and yet it is scarcely touched.

The South Division was crowded yesterday and today with laborers digging for safes in rubbish almost too hot to be touched, and everywhere were rough signs stating the present location of the firms exiled by the flames.

One of the most singular sights of the ruins is the intact condition of the wooden pavements, for the fact that these pavements should not have been riven by the heat of the furnace in which they were placed, is strangely unnatural. No one would have supposed that these blocks of wood could have come out of such an ordeal in better preservation than anything else involved in it, yet such is the case. R. C.

RELIEF.

Liberal Contributions in Europe—American Returning.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—A meeting of citizens of the United States now in Paris was held last night at the rooms of the Washington Club, in response to the call of the American Minister, to take action for the relief of Chicago. Minister WASHBURNE presided and made an eloquent appeal. Speeches were also made by Gen. N. P. BANKS, J. MEREDITH READ, Esq., American Consul-General, and Mr. TOPPER, of Georgia. The sum of 200,000 francs was subscribed on the spot.

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—The Empress AUGUSTA, gratefully remembering the kindly feeling shown by the Americans for Germany during the last war, sends 1,000 thalers to the Committee formed in this City for the relief of the sufferers in Chicago.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 15.—Responding to the call of the New-York Chamber of Commerce, the merchants of the Brussels Exchange have appointed a committee which is receiving subscriptions for Chicago.

VIENNA, Oct. 15.—Mr. JAY, the American Minister, has opened subscriptions for assistance to Chicago.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Many Americans are leaving for home on account of the calamity at Chicago. Gen. BURNSIDE sailed on Tuesday. A meeting was held at Edinburgh last night, the Lord Provost presiding. Resolutions of sympathy for the people of Chicago in their affliction were adopted, and a subscription was opened. At Newcastle, yesterday, a mass-meeting was held, and £1,000 were subscribed for Chicago.

Additional Contributions for the Chicago Sufferers.

A. A. LOW, of the Chamber of Commerce, Treasurer of the Chicago Relief Committee, reports the additional subscriptions of $84,613 80, of which the following are the most considerable:

Joseph Sampson	$1,000	M. Morgan's Sons	$1,000

		Total	$428

Previously acknowledged (with contribution of the NEW-YORK TIMES, $500).....$2,949 77
Total.....$3,097 77

The Trustees of the Jewish congregation B'nai Israel yesterday contributed $131, and the Grand Lodge of the Ancient Jewish Order Kesher Shel Barzel $1,000. The Order of B'nai B'rith expects to raise $10,000 more during the week. Committees of the various Israelite societies are actively engaged in raising money for the sufferers.

The Knickerbocker La Crosse Club has given $100.

At the North Baptist Church yesterday evening $225 was subscribed by the members of the congregation for the sufferers.

St. Michael's Episcopal Church contributed $65.

Neptune Division No. 3, Sons of Temperance, collected $50 at their public meeting last evening.

A Walk Among the Ruins—Remarkable Sights and Scenes—How the Burned District Looks.

From a Special Correspondent.

Never was presented a more mournful scene as last night I walked through the desolate ruins of the South Division of this city. Starting from the hotel at the corner of Michigan-avenue and Congress, which marks the route of the devouring flames, I passed through Congress-street to State, through State to Madison and thence to the West Division. In my front and on the left were lurid flames rising from the great beds of coal along the banks of the river, and here and there among the ruins were little patches of flame, blue or red, where apparently solid granite had break were yet ablaze. From all these flames arose a baneful light that dragged the ruins from the shadows of the night and made every ragged remnant of a wall seem a monument of general desolation. And these remnants were by no means few. Stout walls of granite had been blistered and cracked by the fierce heat, but portions of many yet stood erect amid the ruins. As far as the eye could reach on every side in the red light of the distant coal fields was a chaos of smouldering fire. In the silence and solitude came a sense of desolation no other cause could cause.

If the ruins are weirdly grand by night, it is only by day that a correct idea of the destruction which has been wrought can be obtained. The strong light of day enables the eye to reach for miles on every side, only to view the wreck of what last week was a busy hive of commerce. Imagine an area of 2,500 acres covered with heaps of bricks and ashes, with here and there the remnants of a wall yet erect to tell more plainly the story of destruction. An area four miles long, by an average of three-quarters of a mile wide, with not a house left standing. In this space was the bulk of the wealth which Chicago had accumulated. Stately buildings devoted to commerce art, literature and science, covered a part of this territory. Never was wreck so complete. There is an amazing absence of debris, for the fire seems to have literally swallowed all these huge masses, leaving nothing behind but heaps of ashes and a few shreps of iron. I had expected to find the streets encumbered with huge masses of bricks, iron, and other refuse, but found them almost entirely clear, and nowhere so blocked as to be impassable for vehicles. It seemed as if the fire devoured the buildings so rapidly that only insignificant fragments fell to the ground, and I can readily believe the statement that the flames spread from block to block faster than a man could walk. But complete as is the destruction in the South Division, it is as nothing compared with that in the North Division. There, with one exception, every thing is leveled even with the streets. Not a timber remains, nor one single brick in its place. The one exception is another marvel of this great conflagration, as it is a frame house that was in the midst of the fire, and yet it is scarcely touched.

The South Division was crowded yesterday and today with laborers digging for safes in rubbish almost too hot to be touched, and everywhere were rough signs stating the present location of the firms exiled by the flames.

One of the most singular sights of the ruins is the intact condition of the wooden pavements, for the fact that these pavements should not have been riven by the heat of the furnace in which they were placed, is strangely unnatural. No one would have supposed that these blocks of wood could have come out of such an ordeal in better preservation than anything else involved in it, yet such is the case. R. C.

RELIEF.

Liberal Contributions in Europe—American Returning.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—A meeting of citizens of the United States now in Paris was held last night at the rooms of the Washington Club, in response to the call of the American Minister, to take action for the relief of Chicago. Minister WASHBURNE presided and made an eloquent appeal. Speeches were also made by Gen. N. P. BANKS, J. MEREDITH READ, Esq., American Consul-General, and Mr. TOPPER, of Georgia. The sum of 200,000 francs was subscribed on the spot.

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—The Empress AUGUSTA, gratefully remembering the kindly feeling shown by the Americans for Germany during the last war, sends 1,000 thalers to the Committee formed in this City for the relief of the sufferers in Chicago.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 15.—Responding to the call of the New-York Chamber of Commerce, the merchants of the Brussels Exchange have appointed a committee which is receiving subscriptions for Chicago.

VIENNA, Oct. 15.—Mr. JAY, the American Minister, has opened subscriptions for assistance to Chicago.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Many Americans are leaving for home on account of the calamity at Chicago. Gen. BURNSIDE sailed on Tuesday. A meeting was held at Edinburgh last night, the Lord Provost presiding. Resolutions of sympathy for the people of Chicago in their affliction were adopted, and a subscription was opened. At Newcastle, yesterday, a mass-meeting was held, and £1,000 were subscribed for Chicago.

Additional Contributions for the Chicago Sufferers.

The Trustees of the Jewish congregation B'nai Israel yesterday contributed $131, and the Grand Lodge of the Ancient Jewish Order Kesher Shel Barzel $1,000. The Order of B'nai B'rith expects to raise $10,000 more during the week. Committees of the various Israelite societies are actively engaged in raising money for the sufferers.

The Knickerbocker La Crosse Club has given $100.

At the North Baptist Church yesterday evening $225 was subscribed by the members of the congregation for the sufferers.

St. Michael's Episcopal Church contributed $65.

Neptune Division No. 3, Sons of Temperance, collected $50 at their public meeting last evening.

The Churches Come to the Relief of Chicago—A Large Amount Collected Yesterday.

Collections were made yesterday in aid of the sufferers by the Chicago fire in most of the churches of the following denominations: Protestant Episcopal, Methodist Episcopal, Presbyterian, Unitarian, Baptist and Lutheran. In most instances the pastors made touching appeals to their congregations to contribute liberally to a charity which appealed to every human heart. The following are the amounts of the collections at the leading churches. Collections in the Catholic Churches will be made next Sunday:

Grace Church, about $1,000—figures not yet counted; Transfiguration, $663—subscription not closed; Trinity, $250; St. John's Chapel, $230; St. George's Church, $1,600; St. Mark's, $960; St. Philips, (colored,) $98; Heavenly Rest, $240; Holy Trinity, $1,000—collection not closed; Anthon Memorial, $400.

It is difficult to estimate the amount of money collected in the churches yesterday in aid of the Chicago sufferers, because in many instances where collections were made the sums were not counted. In the following Protestant Episcopal Churches the amounts were not counted nor the subscriptions closed: St. Paul's, corner Broadway and Vesey; Trinity Chapel, Church of the Atonement and Chapel of the Holy Savior. In the Churches of the Advent and St. Alban's the collections will be made next Sunday.

Bedford-street Church, $400; John-street Church, $75; Washington-square Church, $150; St. Paul's Church, $700; Alanson Church, $201; Methodist Episcopal Church, Thirty-seventh-street, $600.

In a large number of the Methodist Episcopal Churches the collections had not been counted, so that no approximate figures could be arrived at.

All Soul's Church, $1,600; Dr. HEPWORTH'S, $2,000 (church open today for contributions of clothing.)

New-England Congregational Church, Madison-avenue and Forty-seventh-street, $397, independent of evening, which has not yet been counted; Tabernacle Congregational Church, $450.

Rutgers Church, Madison-avenue, corner of Twenty-ninth-street, $950, not complete; Twenty-third-street Presbyterian Church, $1,100; Murray Hill, $160; Brick Church, $700.

In the Madison-square Presbyterian Church (Dr. ADAMS') the collection was very large, but had not been counted last night. At the Fourteenth-street Presbyterian Church, the collection was not made, the principal members of the congregation being in town. At the Allen-street and Seventh-street Presbyterian Churches collections will be made next Sunday.

Tabernacle Church, $500; Fifth-avenue Baptist Church, $400; Calvary Church, $1,100; Madison-avenue Baptist Church, $436. In the Baptist Churches, in a large number of instances, the amounts had not been counted.

St. Matthew's, $369.

In the Reformed Dutch churches, and in those of several other denominations, collections will be made next Sunday.

Aid from Brooklyn.

The entire contributions of the Brooklyn churches, yesterday, to the Chicago Relief Fund amounts to nearly $35,000, which, added to the amount given by the City Government, and that previously subscribed by the citizens, makes a total of $167,000.

UNITED ITALY.

A Festival in Rome—Affairs in Sicily—The Tunnel Celebration—Italian Habits—The Season.

From Our Own Correspondent.

FLORENCE, Saturday, Sept. 23, 1871.

The celebration of the 20th passed off quietly at Rome, in spite of the predictions of the prophets of disaster. Smart showers during the morning kept the enthusiasm at a very proper temperature, and no unbecoming incident disturbed the decorum of the day. The Italians have had a yearly experience of the possession of Rome, but unfortunately are no nearer than before to a reconciliation with the Papal Power. The Pontiff and his friends are quiet as close as ever in the Vatican, and refuse to be comforted by any words or largesses which the Government of VICTOR EMMANUEL can offer. My clerical friends tell me that the Holy Father will probably die in the Vatican, without ever again going out into the city which the Vandals have profaned, and it is the general wish among ecclesiastics that it may be so. The head of the Church sitting in an attitude of solemn reserve on the Olympian elevation of the Vatican Hill, presents a spectacle not without dignity. The Italians have wrested rather suddenly from the Pope his temporal power, and have turned without ceremony several thousand monks and nuns out of their cloisters; but it is an affair of family, with which the outside world has nothing to do. The attitude of the Pope is that of a sad appeal to the potentates and Powers of the Catholic world to stamp their feet and declare that this iniquity shall not have their sanction. But no finger is yet lifted in menace to these audacious innovators of most Catholic Italy.

AFFAIRS IN SICILY.

The conflict of authorities in the Island of Sicily continues, and the uncertainty, also, whether Gen. MEDICI, a native of the island, and the most acceptable man, can be induced to retain his power. The sulphur, of which the island is in great part composed, enters into the grain and wine with which the inhabitants are nourished, and puts a volcanic element into their blood. Outbreaks are not uncommon, and apprehensions of disorders are awakened as soon as there is the least derangement of the Government machine. There are Italians who say that the Sicilians are not prepared for liberty, but are more content under an arbitrary Government such as that to which they have been accustomed.

THE TUNNEL CELEBRATION.

Last Sunday was a busy day at Turin, and on the road north to the French side of the mallory under the Alps. A great many had come together from all parts to have a share in the festivities in honor of the accomplishment of a really important work, to which more than a dozen years of patient toil and persevering devotion have been given. The story of the success is told in a few words—a tunnel under the mountains, seven or eight miles long, has been cut, the rails laid, and a train has passed through in twenty minutes; which will probably be the usual running time when the road is used by the public. The joy of the Italians knows no bounds; but of course all rejoice that another great enterprise is brought to a successful termination. It has been a serious disadvantage to the Italian railroads that the barrier of the Alps cut them off from connection with the general European system. From the treasury of the State the no inconsiderable sum of sixty millions of francs is annually paid in subsidies to the different railway companies. It is the form in which encouragement was given to the building of the roads; the sums representing three per cent. on a capital of not far from four hundred millions of dollars. Without such encouragement it is probable that many of the roads would never have been built. It is a serious burden upon the treasury of the State, but the community is benefited, and it cannot be doubted that the money is wisely expended. The time may not be near when the weight will be wholly removed, but with the increased traffic which now may be hoped for, it will be sensibly diminished. When the project of tunneling the Alps was laid before the Parliament of the Sardinian States, it encountered opposition from those who saw difficulties in the way which no human skill could surmount. It would be impossible to ventilate so long a passage, and in the middle of the mountain water-courses, if not lakes, would be broken into, and there was no knowing what unheard of monsters might spring from their hiding-places. But there were men of science who had weighed and measured all possibilities, and were inspired by the faith which removes mountains. The result has justified the wisdom of their foresight. Of the engineers, SOMMEILLER, PIATTI, GRATTONE, and GRAEDEL, who imagined and planned the work, the two former did not live to share in the joy of the full success of their great scheme. Nor was the generous mind of CAVOUR permitted to experience the satisfaction of contemplating the practical benefits of the vast enterprise formed by his intelligence. The solicitude with which the progress of the project has been watched is justified by the event, and the interest will not for some time diminish.

MORES ITALIAE.

The habit of intemperance in the use of wine and liquors is rare in Italy, and such a thing as a temperance society I have never yet heard of in the country. It is the good fortune of Italy to be almost free from the curse of the Northern race, the abuse of alcoholic drinks. But there are other habits which need reform, and among the many new means to improve society are the associations everywhere forming, contro l'uso del coltello—against the use of the knife. The habit of stabbing is at this moment almost as common as in the romantic times of which works of fiction paint such pictures to startle the imagination. Heated blood follows a wordy altercation, and out comes the knife to settle a quarrel, which with us would find an end with a few blows of rigid knuckles. The Romagna is the region in which the largest number of deaths result from the use of the knife, and many a man is walking about who can show the scars of the vulgar rage of an unheroic fight. The purpose of the associations now forming is to do away with the habit of carrying the knife, trusting for defense to natural weapons, such as teeth and nails and feet, and giving to the nations an example of civilization.

THE SEASON.

The wanderers of the Summer begin to come back to this centre of fashionable life, and among them not a few Americans. This, in Italy, is the most beautiful season of the whole year. The atmosphere has a clearness of crystal purity, with a tint of opal. The sky blooms like a splendid flower. The grape-gathering is begun, and garnet and amber-colored clusters load the air with odors of the first wine-making. After four months of almost uninterrupted sunshine, the skies have drops enough of wet to swell the grapes to a glossy plumpness quite fit to madden the eye of all faithful vine-watchers. The voice of merry-making is heard in the fields, and the vendemmia, swelling with plenty, is well begun.

Municipal Corruption—Sermon by Rev. George B. Draper.

Rev. GEORGE B. DRAPER, rector of St. Andrew's Protestant Episcopal Church, Harlem, preached at the morning service a sermon showing that true Christian charity can only spring from honest labor, taking as his text the twenty-eighth verse of the fourth chapter of St. Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians, which runs thus: "Let him that stole steal no more, but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing that is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth." He commenced by expatiating upon the effect of fraudulent wealth upon the moral of the time. There was in all wealth a certain corrupting influence very hard to withstand, which the Savior had alluded to when he said that it was easier for a camel to enter the Needle's Eye than for a rich man to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. But wealth acquired suddenly and by fraud, by corruption, by every species of dishonesty, had an extraordinary effect upon the human heart. It made it hard as the nether millstone. Those who by every kind of villainy succeeded in heaping up millions, were content to clothe themselves in purple and fine linen, to ride in gilded carriages, to drive fast horses, to wear big diamonds, to feed luxuriously, to drain deep draughts of champagne out of golden cups. Little they recked of Lazarus starving at the wayside. It was so three thousand years ago in Tyre and Sidon, and it is so now at the present time. The thieves who have sucked the life-blood out of New-York and are foremost in every speculation and every wild debauch, slink into the background when great wailing cry comes across the prairies from Chicago, a cry almost lost in the immediate but universal answering shout of sympathy. Who were the men that then came bravely to the front, and put down their thousands and their tens of thousands? Not the thieves of the Ring, not the vampires of the City Government. Oh, no! in such a time they were silent. The words of cheer and the deeds of Christian charity came from the honest men of all conditions, from the laborer up to the merchants whose names were a household words, and who were among the honorable of the earth. Nor need any one be startled at this, for it is the very essence of Christianity to teach a man what St. Paul teaches in the verse of the text, that we labor for riches here, not to spend like Dives, but to share with those that need. The Christian merchant is honorable, not alone because honesty pays, but because it elevates the mind and expands the heart. It makes him willing to be truly charitable, charitable from humanity, and for the love of our common human brotherhood. Men may give from ostentation, or that they may show well among their fellows, or because to give is with a true rich man is also a merit advancement. But such givers were not Christian givers, and if their lives and their styles of business were to be examined, it would be shown that though they obeyed the statute law which says thou shalt not steal, they yet did not obey God's eighth commandment, which spoke in the same terms, and yet meant far more.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

The Nassau Men's Meetings.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I observe, in an editorial of this morning's issue of your paper, that you speak of a projected organization of young men, who have heretofore taken no active interest in politics. Though not one after whom the bellos are sighing, or a Man of leisure, and a Democrat beside, I am willing and anxious to unite my efforts with others—to redeem our City from misrule and the administrators of public office from corruption and extravagance. For this I am willing to give some of my time, now employed differently, and some portion of my money, now not over-plentiful.

When you first began to publish your disclosures I looked upon them with great suspicion, and suspected your motives—for I was, and am now, a Democrat, and consequently prejudiced against what I then considered a Radical attack for political purposes. I apologize for my unfounded suspicions and needless prejudice, and acknowledge that you have done a great good. Please publish the time and place of the meetings of this projected association, and I shall be with them. Yours, &c.,

JOHN J. WINNE.

A Timely Hint.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In the Seventh Ward (Fourth Assembly District) a number of firemen have been sworn in as Republican inspectors of election. The present member of Assembly from that district is also a Fire Commissioner, who thus seeks to make his re-election sure. No fireman, under such circumstances, can be a competent inspector, as he will be guided by his own interest, and unless he does as he is directed, he will immediately lose his position on the force by a trumped-up charge. It is the rule, or at least, has been the rule—to keep the Fire Department non-partisan. How can a fireman be relieved from duty to act as register and inspector for four days and also draw pay from the City as a fireman and be a non-partisan?

The repair yard will also furnish its quota of Republican inspectors—men who, although not wearing the uniform, are in the same position as the privates.

CANNOT—and I do not ask the question satirically—Commissioners SHALER and GALWAY stop this? J. S.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Oct. 14, 1871.

Isaac J. Oliver.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Among the names of the "New Grand Jury," as published in your paper today, is "ISAAC J. OLIVER, printer, No. 34 Park-row." Is this not the late Supervisor, now a member of the American Club, whose son is clerk of one of our Courts? If so, I think he had better follow in the footsteps of his friends, A. HALL, Jr., and EUGENE A. HEATH. WEST CHESTER.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Oct. 14, 1871.

The Suspension of the Stuyvesant Bank.

The following explanation is made by the cashier of the Manufacturers' and Merchants' Bank in relation to the Stuyvesant:

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your article in reference to the Stuyvesant Bank in today's issue seems to allege that we ceased to redeem their checks, "without any previous intimation." Such, however, was not the case. We have repeatedly warned the bank that the day would come when it could not borrow the money to make its account good with us, and we have been assured in reply that its condition was constantly improving, and that it would not long upon us. Further; on Wednesday forenoon, we notified the Clearing-house that we would no longer redeem its checks, but withdrew the notice by telegraph on the promise of the cashier of the Stuyvesant Bank to raise $50,000 that day. This promise he was unable to fulfill, and we therefore threw them out, feeling that we had loaned them as much as we ought, in justice to the heavy requirements of our own mercantile customers.

This I say to you that the truth may be known, not as all in defense of our action, which has the expressed approval of prudent bankers and sound business men wherever understood.

The statement that we agreed to discount $100,000 for the Stuyvesant Bank is also wholly incorrect, and due to misunderstanding.

I may add that among the accounts just opened with us by depositors of the Stuyvesant Bank is that of the firm of Mr. COLLAMORE, the President of the bank.

Yours respectfully,

PERCY R. PYNE, 2d, WARREN, Cashier.

THE DEMOCRATIC DILEMMA.

The Question of Nominating a Candidate for President—A Suggestive Article From a Western Organ.

From the St. Louis Republican, Oct. 12.

The active canvassing of candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1872, that took place prior to the elections in California and Maine, has been followed by a more careful reflection on the whole subject, and one startling result of this reconsideration is a suggestion of the question whether there ought to be a Democratic nomination at all. The idea is startling, because it is without a precedent in our national politics, and is profoundly interesting as furnishing a precedent itself. The present theory of party politics is that in important contests both parties must place tickets in the field, even although one of them goes through the formality with the consciousness that its ticket will be certainly defeated. The new theory, on the contrary, assumes the possible existence of conditions in which it is better for one party not to make a nomination at all, but leave the field to its antagonists, in the almost absolute certainty that its antagonists will then divide and present two tickets.

While, however, there is no national precedent for such a course, the experiment is not an untried one; the campaign of last Fall in Missouri furnished a thorough example of the new idea, and it is the very benificent and generally satisfactory results of that example that have suggested a repetition of it on a national scale in the presidential contest of next year. It is asked: Why should not an experiment that proved so successful in breaking the power of Radicalism in Missouri be employed to break the power of Radicalism in the Union? Why should not the whole country find deliverance from a party that is essentially proscriptive, oppressive, unconstitutional and violent in its policy and practice, in the same effective way in which a single State found such deliverance? The result of the Missouri election of 1870 was not, indeed, a Democratic victory; but it was certainly a Radical defeat; and the abolition of disfranchisement, the subsidence of summosities, the restoration of concord and good will among the people, and the revival of a cheerful interest in public affairs and in local enterprises which followed the defeat, are consequences which vindicate the wisdom of the experiment in Missouri, and at least suggest its repetition in a larger field. The contradictory and discordant nature of the several State platforms, both Democratic and Republican, that have been presented to us within the last few months show that both parties have lost their reckoning, and are beating about somewhat wildly. The constitutional amendments and the legislation of Congress since the war have eliminated several very important subjects of difference and dispute from our national policies, and the result is a vacuum in which neither party has a distinctive issue. The only common conviction in the Republican Party is that it ought to be kept in power, to give us such partisan legislation as it has given us in the last six years; and the pre-eminent conviction in the Democratic Party to which all questions of tariff, finance, annexation, and foreign relations are subordinate, is that the Republican Party ought to be overthrown, and a gentler policy substituted for the reign of force which it has given us. The Virginian Conservatives, in their late State Convention, declined to adopt the usual resolutions, and contented themselves with proclaiming as their sole platform, "opposition to Radicalism." The fact expresses a common Democratic instinct, and expresses, too, a feeling which all the liberal and reflecting element of the Republican Party shares. But how is this opposition to be successful? How is the Republican Party to be defeated? How is such a combination of discordant elements, in the teeth of the Administration Party, with its military laws which it has not scrupled to make inoperative, its control of the Federal Treasury, its control of the Federal Patronage, its control of the Federal Courts, its Civil-service rules which it has not scrupled to trample under foot, its Federal troops ready to be used at the polls, its Federal Supervisors, its Federal Marshals, its Federal Deputies, its Federal Commissioners, its Federal Bayonets, its Federal Election laws which it has not scrupled to pervert to the basest purposes, its Federal Returning Boards, its Federal Certificates of Election, its Federal Counting of Votes, its Federal Inauguration, its Federal Administration, its Federal Army, its Federal Navy, its Federal Treasury, its Federal Patronage, its Federal Courts, its Federal

The New-York Times.
DAILY, WEEKLY AND SEMI-WEEKLY.

This journal is now thoroughly identified with the greatest political necessity of the hour—uncompromising warfare against all forms of corruption, whether in national or local government. For years past the TIMES has been exposing the demoralizing schemes of self-interested politicians, and its recent warfare upon the Tammany Democrats has been received with universal approval. It has adhered to the pledge given in its original prospectus, more than twenty years ago, that the public should be truly represented, and their interests faithfully guarded through its columns. Its record has been pure and honorable, and the highest aim of its proprietors is to render it more and more worthy of its past history, and of the confidence which the public repose in it. Two out of three of the original proprietors still direct its policy, and guide it on all public questions. They purpose that the TIMES shall continue to keep clear of all narrow and unworthy influences and cliques, and aim to represent the great body of the public, as distinguished from personal factions. It occupies a perfectly independent position, and is free to speak the truth on all subjects and about all men. Its greatly increased circulation throughout the country adds to its power and influence. It will continue to be a faithful exponent of Republican principles, and advocate with untiring energy every cause which tends to further the welfare of the people.

The utmost care will be devoted to gathering political news from special sources during the Presidential canvass. The department of the paper will be unusually full and trustworthy. Renewed enterprise will be exhibited in every department of the paper, and large space will be devoted to reports of speeches made during elections, or on other important political occasions.

A very full summary of news, and many general articles of great interest, are published in the Semi-weekly editions; and in the Weekly edition there is an unabridged report of the proceedings at the Farmers' Club, an excellent summary of political information, and a great variety of matter suitable for family reading.

The NEW-YORK TIMES is pre-eminently a family paper, all objectionable advertisements being rigidly excluded; and it has a constantly increasing circulation among the most respectable classes of the community.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

President THIERS has announced to the Legislative Committee the signing of the Customs Treaty for Alsace and Lorraine, which recognizes the principle of reciprocity; stipulates that the fourth half milliard of the indemnity shall be paid before the end of March next; that evacuation shall begin a fortnight after the treaty is ratified, and that Germany shall cede to France a small strip of territory. Prince NAPOLEON has asked permission to go to Corsica. A meeting of a Republican Alliance at St. Etienne was broken up by the Police on Saturday. A crisis is threatened in the Austrian Cabinet, VON BEUST declaring that he will resign if the demands of the Czechs are granted. Count WACHTMEISTER, the Swedish Minister of War, died of apoplexy in the streets of Stockholm on Saturday. A fresh insurrection has broken out in Algeria against the French, which the troops quartered there are unable to subdue, and reinforcements will have to be sent from France.... Late advices from Melilla, Africa, represent that the revolted Kabyles had planted a battery within range of the citadel with the intention of bombarding it, but their guns had been silenced by the fire from the Spanish fortifications.... The International Industrial Exhibition at Buffalo was brought to a close on Saturday evening. The goods and articles will remain on exhibition today, the day's proceeds to be devoted to the benefit of the Chicago sufferers.... The Chicago conflagration was alluded to in nearly all the churches yesterday, and contributions to the relief fund taken up. Active measures for raising funds for the Chicago sufferers continue in most of the European capitals. The reports that have been circulated that there was more food at Chicago than could be used are unfounded, as Gen. SHERIDAN stated on Saturday that there was not more than one day's stock on hand. The Secretary of the Treasury has authorized the United States Treasurer to issue one million and a half of United States notes, to take the place of United States notes and national bank notes burned in the Government vault at Chicago.... The corner-stone of the new Post-office in Boston will be laid today.... There was one death from yellow fever on Saturday and one yesterday in Charleston, S. C.

As announced in the TIMES yesterday morning, the Inspectors of Election will meet in each election district to-morrow evening to register the names of voters. The places of meeting have not been published, as they should have been. We call on all honest voters, therefore, first to watch for this announcement, and then to see that their own names are registered. It will also be the duty of the various Reform Committees to inspect the registry lists closely, and require the Inspectors to take notice of their intention to challenge the votes of suspicious persons. The law is framed to remove obstacles to illegal voting. It only remains to make every possible effort to defeat its purpose. Whatever may be the intent and power of the Ring with reference to corrupting the ballot, the vote of every honest citizen makes its task so much the harder. In order to vote with the least chance for confusion or delay, as many electors as possible should be registered to-morrow night.

How Victory May be Won.

Whatever may be the result of the attempts to bring the Tammany thieves to justice through the Courts of law, no opportunity should be lost of beating them at the polls. In this work, all good citizens can take a part. Let them go on preparing for the elections as if our sole hopes of reform depended on their efforts. If anything beyond and beside a defeat of Tammany at the polls can be accomplished, so much the better. But our chief reliance ought to be placed on what we can achieve, by the lawful exercise of the suffrage, next month. After all that has been written during the past twelve months, it is surely unnecessary to point out the overwhelming importance of proving to TWEED that he cannot fulfill his impudent boast of carrying the Tammany ticket by an increased majority. Give TWEED the control of the next Legislature, and we shall see excesses of all kinds, such as even our past melancholy experience has not prepared us for. HALL'S infamous Code amendments, designed for the suppression of free speech and a free Press, would be "put through" in another form. A measure would be passed placing the Tammany leaders beyond reach of punishment. New forms of plundering the people would be devised. It is bad enough to see the Tammany leaders still in office. To allow them to gain renewed possession of the Legislature would be a disgrace to the whole State, and would put an end to all our hopes of restoring an honest government to this City.

We should think that every tax-payer would gladly make up his mind to do all in his power to prevent such a disaster as this. The Council of Political Reform has set on foot a project for securing the election of honest and incorruptible men (without regard to party) to the Legislature, and to offices for which elections are to be held next month. We present the particulars of this movement in another column. It will be seen that a nominating Convention has been proposed, which is calculated to receive the support of all parties outside Tammany Hall. The names were most carefully chosen, with the idea of getting the best men in each of the twenty-one Assembly Districts—and we understand that all the gentlemen selected have agreed to serve. The Republican organizations, and the Reform Democrats, will also combine to secure the success of this scheme. The candidates chosen by the Convention would be men pledged to obtain a reform of the City Government. Such an object ought to call out the vote of every tax-payer who desires to protect his property, and at least sixty thousand men who have neglected to vote in previous years will rally to the support of a ticket nominated on such a basis. Ample means exist for defeating the frauds of Tammany. The young men, on whose co-operation we are disposed to rest very high hopes, will see to it that the registry is honestly conducted. They will also endeavor to call out the full vote of the City. Altogether, we regard this as one of the most promising movements of the day. How far the jealousies of old political hacks may interfere with it we can scarcely measure at this moment. But of one thing we are sure—that if the people will take this election into their own hands, they can win it. They have every inducement for bestirring themselves. If they will not act now, nothing can ever move them to do so. Newspapers cannot save them—they must come to their own rescue, and the plan described elsewhere points out the way.

Why the State Ticket Should be Elected.

The Democratic Party is on trial in the election this Fall, not only for gross corruption in this City, but for mismanagement and wastefulness in the State Government. It must not be forgotten that the evils which have been thrust upon the City were brought about through the agency of the State. It was a Democratic State Legislature which concocted and passed the New-York Charter, and tacked to it all the iniquitous contrivances for cheating the people. It was a Democratic Governor that signed these bills, though he must have known that they violated the very principles of which he has made himself the champion, particularly the principles of local self-government, and general instead of special legislation. As for the way they, therefore, under the awkward provisions of our Constitution, it is our business this Fall to effect a change in the State Government, in order to get at the blunders and crimes committed in City affairs.

We are called on to make this change, also, for the purpose of correcting a number of very serious evils that have crept into the administration of State affairs. We find, for instance, that the Executive officers at Albany spent last year $823,473, which is nearly twice as much as the same departments cost in the year 1865, in which the war closed, when their expenditures were only $476,893. This carelessness in incurring expense exists in other departments as well. Take the canals as an instance. In 1862, under Republican management, the State expended on the canals $1,516,566. Two years later, under Democratic management, the State squandered on them more than double that amount, viz.: $3,695,445. This difference is entirely independent of receipts, and is not, therefore, caused by the reduction of tolls. Turning now to the State prisons, we find that in 1862 and 1863, under Republican management, the three large prisons earned within $104,289 of their expenses, while in 1869 and 1870 they cost, independent of appropriations, $705,197 more than they earned. Nor is this large deficit to be accounted for by the lack of convicts working on contract, for there were more of these in the latter than the former period; nor by reduced rates of wages, for the reduction was trifling; nor by greater cost of maintenance, for all the necessaries of life were far cheaper during '69 and '70 than in '62 and '63. Meanwhile, that the prisons have fallen into a lamentable condition in point of discipline, security, and reformatory efficiency is well known. All these points are set forth in the very able speech delivered by Senator CONKLING at Albany, and published by us on Thursday last. We hope the facts contained in that speech will be carefully studied by all classes of the people.

It is unfortunate that the personnel of the Government which is responsible for these abuses cannot be changed at once and completely; but as it cannot we must see to it that the members of the Prison and Canal Boards, and the Executive officers to be chosen this Fall, are free from all suspicion of connivance with this policy. Can this be said of the ticket renominated at Rochester by the Convention that recognized Tammany as the sole Democratic organization in New-York City, and refused to name for Attorney-General the ablest Democratic lawyer of the State, because he was personally too honest?

The Democratic Circus.

The Democratic Party appears to have become sadly demoralized since the Rochester Convention. The ugly but incontrovertible fact that Tammany ruled the Convention and dictated the nominations, is producing a general lukewarmness with regard to the ticket in the Democratic ranks, while many are inclined to open revolt. The rural delegates who sold out to TWEED at Rochester, find, on their return home, that they cannot satisfy their constituents by talking about the "regularity" of Tammany, and the necessity of retaining her vote for the ticket. The honest Democrats of the State demanded, and had a right to expect, that their State Convention would repudiate all further alliance with an organization whose leaders have shocked the moral sense of the world by their crimes; but instead of that, they find that Tammany was recognized by the Convention as the only representative of Democracy in New-York, that its old ticket was renominated, and that the delegation representing the only Democracy in this City that is not a disgrace to the party, was studiously ignored by the Convention from the beginning of its proceedings to the end.

The World, with its usual folly, has been trying hard, ever since the Convention adjourned, to get over the difficulty by boldly denying notorious facts, and asserting that to be true which everybody else knows to be false. Mayor HALL has hitherto been credited with the faculty of wandering farther from the truth in his public utterances than any man in this region, but even he is constrained to rebuke the World, in the last number of his paper, (the Leader,) for its silly attempt to misrepresent the doings of the Rochester Convention. "Two facts," he truly says, "cannot be gainsayed. The Tammany delegates, on the call of the roll, signed a memorial to the Convention. It was read and put on file. It was acted on instantly by the following resolution:

"No delegation being now present from New-York having the prestige of regularity, or having been elected in conformity with the call of the State Central Committee, therefore,

Resolved, That in the call of the roll New-York be omitted in the future proceedings of this body, and no delegation be deemed as sitting from that locality."

This resolution received the vote of all the delegates excepting three. Observe the word 'now.' The word was, as lawyers might say, one pregnant with an affirmative."

The Mayor then quotes from the address of the contesting delegation, headed by CHAS. O'CONOR, complaining that, although they went before the Committee on Credentials and proved their right to seats in the Convention, yet the Committee "made a report entirely ignoring your delegation, and making no reference to the claims presented by them." Not only does the Mayor expose the falsity of the repeated assertions of the World about the Rochester Convention, but he even has the cruel malignity to expose the two-faced game that is being played by the Democratic leaders in the present campaign. "If," says the Leader, "Democratic papers can get votes in the interior by pitching into Tammany, well and good. The World and Argus doubtless have their country policy, and City Democrats hold theirs." That is it exactly. The rural Democrats are to be made to believe that Tammany was kicked out of the Convention, and that the party has repudiated all further connection with her, while the City Democracy know full well that TWEED had everything his own way, at Rochester, and he still controls the Tammany Hall and leaders of the Democratic Party. This is precisely the policy that the World itself recommended with regard to the July riots, only at that time the World was with Mayor HALL as against the Governor, who represented the country Democracy. On that occasion, it will be recollected, the World congratulated its party that it would not lose any votes by its fatal blunder, because, "while HOFFMAN'S action would give him popularity in the country, HALL'S course would add to his popularity in the City." It would be interesting to know the precise estimate which the World puts upon the intelligence of its readers. It may be regarded as fortunate, in one sense, for the Democratic Party that it has so many followers who cannot read at all. If the ability to read and write were a necessary qualification for voting in this State, and the World were the only Democratic paper circulated, there would soon be no Democratic Party left.

A Word in Season.

The control of the Ring over our system of popular education is one of the most serious features of their iniquitous administration. Last Winter, it will be remembered, the finances of the City were put absolutely into the hands of these four men, with an almost unlimited power of borrowing from the future by the issue of bonds. Not content with this, these ambitious leaders sought successfully to place every branch of the City Administration under the control of their subordinates. The Central Park, whose management had been a model of economy and organization, was taken from a Board against whom not a reproach had ever been uttered, and transferred to Mr. PETER B. SWEENY and his tool, Judge HILTON. The Board of Charities and Correction, by the addition of Mr. FERAR, was rendered a "Tammany machine," so far as appointments were concerned—though owing to the high character of some of the Commissioners, it is but just to say that its management has not been as corrupt as other Departments.

The Board of Commissioners of Emigration in like manner became an instrument of Tammany and the Erie Ring. The Police, through the convenient suppleness of the Tammany Republicans, was rendered also an implement of TWEED, SWEENY and HALL. By these manœuvres, and the creation of the Board of Works, all the public charities, Police, care of emigration, the public works and parks, and the finances of this Metropolis were utterly handed over to the charge of four unscrupulous men. There only remained the Department where least money could be made by corruption, but where influence is most profound and vital—the Board of Education. This these shrewd conspirators threw entirely into the power of the Mayor. He was empowered by the legislation of last Winter "to appoint twelve Commissioners of Common Schools, recognizing the principle of representation to the minority, provided for"—that is, he was to select five out of the twelve from the Republican Party. As may be supposed, the Republicans chosen by the Mayor did not represent very closely the feelings and views of the minority. The Board was, in fact, a Board of the Mayor's and the Ring. Still, the force of public opinion brought to bear at that time on Mayor HALL did, it must be confessed, produce a better Board than we shall ever have again, unless our citizens awake to their duty.

The act provided that in the election to come off in November the twelve Commissioners shall be voted for upon a separate general ticket, but only seven names shall be on one ticket; then the seven persons having the highest number of votes shall be declared by the County Canvassers as elected. Then the minority is sought to be protected by empowering the Mayor to appoint the five persons having the next highest number of votes to the seven elected. Why the County Canvassers did not also pronounce upon the election of the five Republicans as well as the seven Democrats is not clear, except it be to throw as much power in the hands of the Mayor as possible, and give him the opportunity of selecting from a considerable number of Republican candidates.

This election, thus provided for by law, will take place in a month. Are honest citizens of all parties, who are opposed to the Ring and all their ways, preparing suitable candidates for these very important offices? On the shoulders of these twelve gentlemen will rest the burden of our popular education during the coming three years. The position is a most important one. The shape and form of the training of our free schools will depend much on the intelligence and character of these officials. The choice of books, of methods, the selection of teachers, and the general expenditure in this important Department will be determined by the twelve Commissioners. It is of the utmost importance that the corrupt clique who have done so much to disgrace the character of this City, and debauch public morals, shall not also have control of its education. Let Republicans confer with honest Democrats, and put up a compromise ticket of men without a shade on their names, and who are likely to be practically acquainted with matters of education. Or, if this be impracticable, let the Democrats present a spotless ticket, and the Republicans their very best men. The minority is sure of at least five out of the twelve.

If, as is not unlikely, there should be three tickets of seven names—the Reform Democrats, the Tammany Party and the Republicans—it might turn out that the latter would be pushed out altogether. To avoid this possible evil, a union ticket between the Reform Democrats and our friends would seems the wisest course. At all events, it is full time to be preparing for the election. A month is a short space for combining so many elements and for selecting the best men. Let us have a Board of Education in which the people will feel confidence, and worthy of the progress of the age in every other department of improvements in the science of education—and above all, a Board of honest men.

The International Society.

The objects of almost any given society are, of necessity, variously described by its friends and its foes. Thus, Gen. GARIBALDI, in writing a description of the famous "International" to a correspondent, says that certain persons, even among his own intimate acquaintances, have treated the Society "as if it meant the same thing as petroleum and conflagration." It cannot be denied that the International, so far as it was represented by the acts of the Commune, stands in no very enviable position in the eyes of the world; yet we must all admit the propriety of listening to what so pure a member of the Society as GARIBALDI has to say in its behalf. This, then, is his account of its objects:

"The International has for the fundamental basis of its programme, First—Its name, which regards alike the African and the American, the European and the Asiatic, that is to say, the fraternity of man, to whatever nation they may belong. Secondly—The International will have none of the priest—that is to say, no lies. Thirdly—No standing army, for that perpetuates war, but a citizen militia for the maintenance of intestine order. Fourthly—The International wishes for the administrative Government of the Commune; and it is one of the chief glories of Paris that the central of France—a city more than any other interested in maintaining a central Government, voluntarily renounces the metropolitan domination which has lasted so many ages, and leaves to its sister cities that unalienal freedom which is as sacred as the liberty of the individual or of the nation."

These objects, for which so much may be said in themselves, but which are so hostile to existing authority, certainly include no warrant for the excesses of the Commune; yet it seems as hard for the International to escape the stigma of those excesses as for the Confederates to evade responsibility for the atrocities of Andersonville. As regards the power and numbers of the Society, both probably exceed the general opinion. The Ministers of Germany and Austria certainly do not underrate them. It is known that in Berlin the International is immensely strong, and that it has now a stronghold even in Vienna. One of the three chief points discussed at the late Gastein Conference was how best to deal with this threatening combination. In London the Society has notorious strength, and it is said that nearly all the Germans in that metropolis belong to it. One thing seems as positive as destiny, and that is, that if the International Society cannot by some means be disintegrated, or its power for mischief dispersed, the reigning dynasties of Europe must depend for future existence absolutely on the bayonet. The organization undermines thrones as surely as rivers seek the sea, and the assailant or assailed can flourish hereafter only at the price of a crushing victory over the other.

Burglary as a Fine Art.

Villainy may long go unpunished, so long that its impunity may seem destined to be perpetual, but it is pretty sure to be brought up with a round turn at last. Mr. SANBORN, formerly of Bristol, N. H., but more recently the guest of City Marshal PHILBRICK, of Lawrence, Mass., must entertain just now a lively sense of this fact. Mr. SANBORN has committed no fewer than thirty burglaries, and yet until last week has never been inside a jail. In fact, although on one occasion in the hands of an officer, whence he managed with great dexterity to escape, this "champion" burglar has never before been even formally arrested. Lost time will, however, be forthwith made up, no doubt. There are indictments enough against him to cover, on conviction, half a dozen ordinary human lives; and Mr. SANBORN, unless he proves as great a genius at breaking out of prisons as he is at breaking into dwellings, will follow his picturesque profession no more.

There are several peculiarities about this man's career that render it worthy of note. In the first place, it appears to have been absolutely solitary. No confederate was admitted to SANBORN'S plans to share the booty or betray confidence. Furthermore, and this is accounted one great secret of his unparalleled success in crime, this burglar worked upon certain inflexible principles. All his operations were conducted by night, and from this rule he never deviated. During the day he was invariably concealed, and shunned, with unremitting caution, the face of man. In Summer he slept in the woods or among the mountains. In Winter he generally found some out-of-the-way deserted house, wherein he could take up his quarters until Spring. Besides this, the officers say he is a man of extraordinary coolness and nerve, who has preserved for years a kind of iron mastery of himself, never drinking, and leading, in truth, almost the life of an ascetic; circumstances obviously favorable to all persistent designs, whether of virtue or vice. So rigid was SANBORN in adhering to his rules that it has repeatedly happened that he has suffered from hunger for days, while having thousands of dollars in his pocket, and yet would not venture into any neighboring settlement for food. He pursued house-breaking apparently as a fine art, and cared more for the successful accomplishment of his schemes than for the fruits of them. Sometimes, inflamed with a noble ardor, he would perform almost unheard-of feats of professional skill. Thus, on one memorable night he committed no fewer than seven robberies—four at Methuen and three at Haverhill—each of the latter, at least involving the forcible entry of a house, and got off in safety. To facilitate his operations he carried a peculiar lantern, having a very narrow slit for light, and this capable of being instantly and noiselessly covered. He was shod with felt, like the imaginary warriors of King Lear, and he was provided with a singular revolver that throws four balls at one discharge.

A great many watches and jewels, as well as other portable property, were found at SANBORN'S lair, and several thousands of dollars were taken from his person. He is described, however, as looking on these material trifles with contempt. He prosecuted his studies, we are to infer, for pure love of art, and found his reward in an approving consciousness. It is clear that in the absence of confederates, no other guerdon could be appealed to. He most obviously find recompense in mere self-admiration. Let his breast swell with noble elation as it might, there was none to share his triumph, to glory over his hazardous empire. Like King RICHARD, he was himself alone, and must draw approval, no less than inspiration, from within. Yet SANBORN has not always been without the sweets of approbation from his fellow-men. In youth he was bred a carriage-maker, and became a remarkably skillful mechanic. Prepossessing in appearance and bearing, he was much liked, and was thought in his way quite a brilliant fellow. Unluckily, he signalized himself at the early age of twenty—now sixteen or eighteen years ago—by stealing his employer's stock in make up into carriages to sell in competition. Detected, he burst into tears—only because found out, since on the same night he committed another considerable theft—and was let off. His subsequent rascalities were many, but none were ever brought home, and during the last few years, despite the wonderful number of his crimes, his cunning and luck have hitherto saved him. It is now said that several people have known from time to time where SANBORN was, but that their fears of possible vengeance on themselves has prevented them from taking steps for his apprehension.

"None are all evil," and it would appear, sadly enough, that the tender spot in this man's heart was the indirect occasion, at last, of his arrest and destruction. In his birthplace of Bristol lived SANBORN'S wife—a dismal life she must have had of it, poor woman—and his children. One of these, the favorite, died lately. The father was with it at the final moment, and, after closing the little creature's eyes in their last sleep, fled to the mountains. But the officers of the law had got on his track, and they traced him like sleuth-hounds until he was hunted down. He was impassible as ice when taken, and fully maintained his reputation for pluck and steadiness. It is melancholy to think of what SANBORN, under other circumstances, might have been—of the distinction he might have won for himself, and the good he might have conferred on mankind. So striking an example of the misdirection of fine natural powers is not often seen, and it enforces a lesson of painful utility.

Kings County Republicans.

An effort has just been made in Brooklyn to remedy a very serious evil in the Republican Party of that city. We refer to the action of the State Convention directing that all representative bodies—the General Committee and the nominating conventions—of the Republican Party in Kings County, should be composed of delegates proportioned in number to the Republican vote in the districts from which they come. The justice and sound sense of this principle are so palpable that one is at a loss to understand on what grounds it could be opposed. Yet the direction of the State Convention has actually been evaded by the course of a small majority of the General Committee of the county. This faction, refusing to carry out any plan that could be proposed for applying the principle sanctioned by the Convention, has succeeded in ordering the conventions for nominating candidates for local and legislative offices to be chosen by the old, bungling, and oppressive system of five delegates to each ward and town. Under this system—expressly abolished by order of the State Convention, and now continued in violation of the explicit advice of that body—less than one-fourth of the Republican voters of Kings County can control the nominating conventions. To specify, the five country towns, and the First, Second, Fifth, Eighth, Ninth, Twelfth, Fourteenth and Eighteenth Wards, and three delegates from any other ward, (say the Twenty-second,) representing 5,338 voters, would cast sixty-eight votes in convention, while the remaining delegates, representing 17,007 voters, would cast but sixty-seven.

An appeal has been made to the State Committee to overrule this action of the Local Committee. We trust it will be granted. The authority of the State Convention to make the original ruling is not disputed. The State Committee is the legitimate and sole representative of the Convention to carry out the ruling. If a bare majority of a local committee is to be allowed to perpetuate an obviously unjust system, in defiance of the direction of the Convention, there is little use in the Convention's taking any action for reform of abuses. And we may add there is little hope in this particular case, that such immunity granted to a faction will lead to anything but humiliating discord and defeat.

MINOR TOPICS.

We quote an article from a contemporary in regard to the difficulty experienced by the laboring men, employed by the City Departments, in getting their wages. The writer in the News justly points out that after the Ring have put the working men's money into their own pockets, or the pockets of their friends, they try to incite their victims to "acts of lawless violence." HENRY HILTON (Mr. A. T. STEWART'S "manager") is proved to have taken a direct part in one of these attempts to create a riot. In a quiet way, the same effort is still kept up. The very men who robbed the laborers are now directing them to go to Mr. ANDREW H. GREEN and other gentlemen for their money. One of the thieves even undertakes to lead the laborers in their misguided expeditions. The News, a paper with considerable influence among working men, puts the whole question before them in a very clear light. Truth and justice do not always gain a fair hearing, but in this case we hope the laboring men will turn upon HILTON and his gang and ask, "What have you done with our money? How much of it did you get?"

The subscriptions for the relief of Chicago show no sign of flagging, and we hope they will not, for it is quite evident that the distress among the people is even greater than was at first described. Moreover, the sufferers in Wisconsin [illegible] Before this appeal reaches [illegible] every effort ought to be made to provide food and shelter for the thousands of persons who have been rendered homeless. It will be seen from the cable news today that subscriptions have been opened in Edinburgh and Newcastle, and other parts of Great Britain, and we have no doubt that a very large sum will be received from this source. The sympathies of the English people are evidently deeply stirred. But continued and combined efforts will be necessary to prevent a famine treading closely upon the heels of this awful series of fires.

Attorney-General CHAMPLAIN has responded to the questions put to him by the "Democratic Union," as to what he would do, if re-elected, to bring the Tammany thieves to justice. He says, in substance, that he will institute vigorous prosecutions against the criminals wherever requested to do so by the citizens of New-York; in other words he will take such official action as the law compels him to take when he can no longer evade it. Then won't he! What the people want is an Attorney-General who is free from all obligations to Tammany. Shall we never have one in order to secure a prosecution may be so conducted as to screen a criminal more effectually than the utmost defiance that can be interposed in his behalf; and, in that case, it is better for the public that no attempt [illegible] be prosecuted at all, for he gets the benefit of a fraud acquitted. We venture to think [illegible] that when Gen. CHAMPLAIN was nominated by Tammany Hall for the office of Attorney-General, he had a man who can command the confidence of the public in conducting any criminal prosecution against the leaders of that organization. We have a District-Attorney (Joe Pinkney), in this County at the present time; and if Tammany is to remain the State's Attorney, the better sort, our citizens may give up all hopes of recovering their stolen property or punishing the thieves.

A proclamation by Gov. GRATZ BROWN, of Missouri, calls out the militia of Stoddard and Dunklin Counties, in the south eastern part of Missouri, to break up the secret marauding bands which infest that section. An officer from the State Adjutant-General's office reports bands to the number of 200 and more, burning, murdering, maltreating and robbing, [illegible] over the country, in daytime, at night from the [illegible] of that account. He says they have no political design, though they undoubtedly [illegible]. But he does not deny that their victims are always Republicans, black or white, and those who [illegible] or sympathize with them are invariably Democrats. It is to be hoped that Gov. BROWN'S measures will be sharp and effective. If they are not, the value of the expenditure by Missouri on the matter of amnesty will be very seriously lessened.

Has it occurred to the sincere Irishmen in this City, who believe that Home Rule for Ireland would be wise and just, that their voting almost to a man for the Democratic Party has dealt a severe blow to the prospect of any such change in the government of their native country? The London Spectator, with some show of reason, argued that the Democratic rule in New-York is Irish rule, and is a serious shame, and that Irish rule in Ireland would be no better. Certainly the only way to counteract such arguments as these, which have a radix force not easily combated, is for intelligent and honest Irishmen to show the world that they can help remove the evils the misdeeds of their countrymen have brought on New-York. Such an exhibition of judgment and patriotism would promote more than the conquest of the entire New Dominion by "Gen." O'NEIL, all legitimate aspirations of Irishmen for Ireland.

The Lexington, Ky., Press wants to know if the TIMES believes that its views on the constitutional amendments "equins toward revolution," or if the "Democracy mean revolution." We understand the views of the Press to be that the amendments ought to be repealed, or declared null by the Supreme Court, and ought not to be accepted, and then, if the party gain power, be ignored or nullified. This is a perfectly intelligible policy, and one which a man may adopt with a clear conscience. It does not "equins" toward revolution, using that word in its ordinary sense of overturning a Government by violence. Yet it is a policy which, the Press must come, some time, to understand, the courts of the United States are as resolutely opposed to as to revolution. That policy is to attempt to change the settlement that has been given to the questions growing out of the war. The amendments involve that settlement, and, in the present and apparently fixed temper of the people, it is useless to try to reverse them amendments or alter that settlement. What the Democracy may mean in regard to this question we cannot say, for it is plain that the Democracy does not itself know. But whether it means to try to repeal the amendments, or procure their condemnation by the Supreme Court, or accomplish them by "constitutional legislation," it will fail. In our view, therefore, the endless discussion upon the subject by the Lexington Press and the Louisville Courier-Journal is not so important as it naturally seems to those papers.

THE INDIANS.

Vincent Colyer's Mission—Statements that Conflict Slightly.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 14.—VINCENT COLYER has arrived at Los Angeles. He telegraphs a long account of his doings in Arizona, and considers he has accomplished a complete success. He found the Apaches thoroughly peacefully inclined, very intelligent and trustworthy, honest, and perfectly willing to receive presents of food and clothing, and to be supported on the reservations. He thinks there will be no more trouble. On the other hand people familiar with the Apache character assert that the peaceful demonstrations are wholly due to the activity of the United States troops under Gen. CROOK, and the Mexican forces in Sonora. Next week, when COLYER'S visit takes away the substantial result of a successful campaign, the Indians on Camp Grant reservation recommenced depredations before COLYER was fairly out of sight.

The Post-Office at Boston—Preparations to Lay the Corner-Stone.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 15.—The corner-stone of the new Post-office will be laid with Masonic ceremonies at 2 P. M. to-morrow, in presence of President GRANT, Postmaster-General CREWELL, Secretaries BOUTWELL, BELKNAP, ROBESON, and other National and State dignitaries. Postmaster RUSS, of Boston, and the officers connected with the Department in New-England, have arranged for the entertainment of invited guests of the Postoffice Department. The Postmasters of Montreal, St. Johns, New-York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Albany, Syracuse, Rochester, Buffalo, Detroit, Providence, Portland and other cities, have signified their acceptance of invitations, and will be present at the ceremonies. In the absence of the general banquet, which was waived at the suggestion of the President, a number of liberal citizens are providing private entertainments for the distinguished guests.

POLITICAL.

OHIO.

The United States Senatorship—Pendleton, Goode, &c., to take Seat in the Senate.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The result of the Ohio election is generally considered to have settled the return of Hon. JOHN SHERMAN to the United States Senate, and much seems to be the feeling in Ohio. It is understood there that Secretary DELANO is not a candidate under any circumstances, though some of those who warmly favor the re-election of Mr. SHERMAN seem to fear a drop de mare by Mr. DELANO at the last moment. Gen. SCHENCK is out of the contest by reason of his position at the Court of St. James, though no his friends who would still press him for the Senatorial office. If there were any hope of success under the circumstances, Mr. BINGHAM is regarded as a possible candidate, but not as likely to succeed, as Gen. GARFIELD would be. If he were to contest the place with SHERMAN, besides GARFIELD'S position respecting the tariff is more acceptable with the Republican sentiment in Ohio. But GARFIELD, it is supposed, is certain to be made Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee when Congress meets. All these circumstances seem to combine with good fortune for Mr. SHERMAN, and whether there will be a contest of any vigor against him now, seems doubtful, because the opposition is without organization and union.

LOCAL POLITICS.

The German Patriots and Municipal Reform.

The German Patriots of the Revolution of 1848 met at a meeting yesterday, Gen. MAX WEBER presiding, passed resolutions, declaring that the prevailing corruption, if not stayed, will sure only result in the ruin of the City, but must ultimately affect the whole republic; that all must unite in efforts to reform, from whatever party or cause, must be supported, and that all non-political organizations should take an active part in the reform movement.

A Practical Plan for Effecting Reform Here.

At a meeting of the New-York City Committee of Political Reform, held Sept. 23, 1871, Messrs. Charles Watrous, W. F. Havemeyer, Joseph C. Jackson, C. E. Detmold, James M. Halstead, Reuben S. Schultz, J. E. Havemeyer, George C. Barrett, Henry Ihsell, J. R. Varnum, S. D. Bruen, John F. Cronly, O. B. Wood, W. E. Nellson and R. W. Rowe were appointed a sub-committee with power for the purpose of calling a Convention, to be composed of three delegates from each of the Assembly Districts of the City and County of New-York, and twenty-one delegates at large, and to fill vacancies therein. The object of the Convention to be the nomination of candidates for the Judicial, Legislative, City and County offices, to be voted for at the election in November next.

The fundamental principles for the guidance of the Convention to be:

First—All the nominees to be men who not only are, and have the reputation of being, competent, honest, upright and in every way fitted to represent the City, and fill its offices in the emergencies of the present crisis.

Second—The candidates to be selected with reference to the unmixed political character of the nominees, without regard to any other than just claims of intrinsic fitness to be considered.

Third—The candidates to be made after fully considering and co-operating with the various political organizations of the City, and not by any "Ring" or "Hall."

Fourth—The ticket when so nominated to be presented to the various non-partisan political organizations for their indorsement and support, and to the people at large, at a meeting to be called for that purpose.

Fifth—The Convention thus invited is to effect its own organization, and thereafter to deliberate for the general good without reference to the body which called it into being.

The delegates to the Convention called by the Committee assembled in the Cooper Institute Hall on Saturday evening. Many of the most influential members of the Council were present to aid in the deliberations of the delegates, of whom there were forty-eight in attendance. The Convention was called to order by CHAS. WATROUS, and Dr. RUDOLF STRACKWITZER was elected Property (Chairman, and Mr. HENRY J. RUBE Secretary.

A resolution was offered by HENRY J. SCUDDER that a committee of twenty-eight, one to be selected by the delegates from each district, and seven to be designated by the Chair, be appointed to confer with honest Conventions, if any such exist, and to report to their own Convention at a meeting to be held on Tuesday next, as adopted. The delegates are to meet at the office of JOSEPH C. JACKSON, No. 7 Nassau-street, this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The Committee on Permanent Organization reported as follows, and their report was unanimously adopted: President, WM. M. EVARTS; Vice-Presidents, Augustus Kelly, William H. Aspinwall, James W. Beekman and Oscar Kollock; Secretary, Henry R. Beers; Assistant Secretary, Thomas L. Thornell.

The Convention then adjourned until Friday evening.

Subjoined is the list of delegates at large:

William M. Evarts, Eugene Kelly, James W. Beekman, William H. Aspinwall, Henry R. Beers, Hamilton Fish, Abraham Hewitt, Joseph D. Varnum, Theodore B. Banks, Oscar Zolnhoefer, Frederick E. Coudert, Charles Crary, Frederick Shaw, Ernest Cayley, Isaac Wood, F. P. Fabbri, Minor S. Van Winkle, C. E. Detmold, Alfred C. Post, John E. Parsons, Isaac Bonehrake, Henry M. Beers.

The following is a list of the District Delegates:

Hall's Six Excuses.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

HALL'S excuses remind me forcibly of the defense of a man who was sued to recover the value of a bottle which he had borrowed of a neighbor and returned broken. The defense made three points: 1st, he never had the bottle; 2d, the bottle was broken when he got it; 3d, it was whole when he took it home.

LEXINGTON AVENUE.

Mr. Nelson's Declination.

HON. HOMER A. NELSON'S letter declining the Democratic nomination for the Senate is as follows:

FOUGHKEEPSIE, Oct. 12, 1871.

To E. E. Andrus, H. W. Rockwell, A. C. Hartley, &c., Sent. Senate District Committee of the Eleventh Senatorial District New-York:

GENTLEMEN: I see by the newspapers of this date that at the Senatorial Convention held at the Worth House, in the City of Hudson, on the 11th inst., I was unanimously nominated as the Democratic candidate for Senator. While I fully appreciate the kind manner in which my name was received by the members of the convention, I feel compelled to decline the nomination. With much respect, I am your friend and obedient servant,

HOMER A. NELSON.

POLITICAL NOTES.

SIMON REED is the Republican nominee for Assembly in Schoharie.

Hon. CARL SCHURZ has been invited to speak in New-Orleans.

The Democrats of Chemung have renominated AUGUSTUS HILL for Assembly.

The Fulton County temperance men have nominated ISAAC V. FRALIC for Assembly.

FRANK L. STOWELL has been nominated for Senator by the Democrats of the Thirty-second District.

In Pennsylvania, Col. BIDDLE, for Surveyor-General, leads Dr. STARKWEATHER several thousand, and his majority will be over 20,000.

WILLIAM LEWIS, JR., has been nominated for Assembly by the Republicans of the First District of Delaware County.

The county taxes of Maryland have been nearly doubled since the State fell into the hands of the Democrats.

It is asserted that no Democrat has ever been murdered for his political opinions in this country, North or South.

The Democrats of Erie County nominated on Saturday, WILLIAM C. FISCO for Senator, D. M. DICKINSON for District Attorney, and ROSWELL TOWNE for Surrogate.

EDWARD B. WELLS, now Supervisor of Clyde, and one of the earliest pioneers, has been nominated for Assembly by the Republicans of the First District of Wayne County.

The total debt of Pennsylvania on the 30th of September, was $34,327,134 72. The reduction by redemption of State loans during that month, was $184,000.

It appears that the Democrats of Pennsylvania elected three of the eleven Senators chosen on the 10th, and that body will therefore stand seventeen Republicans to sixteen Democrats.

Gen. A. R. WRIGHT, of Augusta, seems to be becoming prominent as a candidate for United States Senator in Georgia. He was an officer in the rebel army, but never held office of any kind before the war.

The Democratic Convention in Chautauqua County instructed its delegates to vote for the renomination of Hon. RICHARD P. MARVIN for re-election as Justice of the Supreme Court, declaring their political preference and declaring that they wished only "an honest Judge."

The "Reform" Democrats of Albany have published a long address, recounting many of the misdeeds of the regulars of the party there, apparently with little effect upon the latter, who, like their New-York accomplices, have neither shame nor conscience.

Hon. JAMES H. GRAHAM, of Delhi, Delaware County, who has heretofore rendered efficient service as a member of Assembly, has been nominated for the Senate by the Republicans of the Thirty-third District. The Democrats have nominated SAMUEL YOUMANS, also of Delhi.

Gov. SCOTT, of South Carolina, is represented by the Charleston Courier to have recently said that he is opposed to a declaration of martial law in that State. He also said that he will not be a candidate for re-election, and that he will do all he can to secure the nomination of good men by the Republican State Conventions.

The Republican Convention for the Thirty-second Senatorial District balloted ten times ineffectually, and the convention went over to-day next. The leading candidates were A. D. SOUTH, the present Senator, and JONATHAN M. ALLEN, who was Senator in 1869. On the last ballot the vote stood—SOUTH, 39; E. E. CROWLEY, 10.

The Lynchburg Virginian admits that there is manifested in some portions of Virginia a disposition to make the repudiation of the existing State debt an issue in the canvass, and it says that in some cases respectable gentlemen are endeavoring to commit the candidates of the Conservative Party for the Legislature to it.

BURROUGHS HOLMES is the Anti-Dramshop candidate for Assembly in the Third District of Sangamon County. He has withdrawn in favor of either of the other candidates who will publicly pledge himself to endeavor to secure the passage of a Prohibitory Liquor law, if a majority of the voters in his district petition him so to do.

The new President of the Tennessee Senate is warmly indorsed by a correspondent of ABRAM H. STEPHENS. He speaks of him as "the favorite of our friends in East Tennessee, and contributed his part powerfully in the first victory at Fort Sumter, and surrendered in Georgia, at Washington, Wilkes County, by order of President DAVIS, who parted with him then."

The Hartford Times thinks the result of the October elections, so far as the Democrats are concerned, will be the nomination of a man who is not an utter partisan for President, for whom all can heartily vote who are willing to unite on a People's candidate. The Times seems to speak in behalf of the new programme of which other Democratic papers profess so great ignorance.

The Democratic Convention of the Eighth Judicial District in Buffalo, on Saturday, advanced that Hon. RICHARD P. MARVIN, the present Judge, be supported, irrespective of party, for re-election, Judge MARVIN'S age is understood to be within two years of the limit set by law for incumbents of this position, and this was, apparently, the strongest argument used in preventing his renomination by the Republican Convention.

All reports of combinations on the part of Hon. A. A. SARGENT and GEORGE C. GORHAM, of California, to influence the selection of a United States Senator, are denied on the authority of both; and in behalf of the former, it is said that he would prefer to return to private life rather than to occupy a position in the great council of the nation, if he has to go there crammelled and tied up with pledges and promises to railroad corporations or individuals.

Lieut.-Gov. POWERS, H. R. PEASE, H. MUSGROVE, J. S. MERRY, James Lynch, and George C. McKee, with others, are actively engaged in behalf of the Republican Party in the northern Mississippi. The Jackson Pilot says that the Democrats in many places are attending the Republican meetings, and that Republican newspapers are having a greatly-increased circulation, and are being read by a much greater number of the people than in any year since the beginning of reconstruction in the State.

A statement by Gov. BROWN, of Tennessee, in his inaugural, that the debt of the State after the war was swelled in four years from $16,000,000 to $45,000,000, has called out a sneering letter from Senator BROWNLOW denouncing such recklessness of assertion as wholly inexcusable. The Senator also takes occasion to say that he believes martial law ought to be declared in Tennessee, and Federal troops enough sent to the State to protect every citizen in his rights, and put a stop to the murder of citizens by Gov. BROWN'S partisan Ku-Klux friends."

Of LUCIEN T. THOMANN, the Republican candidate for Assembly in the Second District of Wayne County, the Palmyra Journal says: "Mr. THOMANN is a young man of superior abilities, thorough-going in business, well educated, conversant with political matters, and incorruptibly honest. The interests of the district could not be entrusted to safer hands. The conviction that he will prove an industrious, honest and popular member is general through the district, and we do not hesitate to say that he will be elected by an old-fashioned majority."

Gov. BROWN, of Tennessee, in his inaugural address alluded to the growing prosperity of the State as a subject of sincere congratulation, and said that the most pressing and important duties to be discharged by the new administration, under circumstances of peculiar difficulty, is to preserve the good faith of the State by placing her credit upon a permanent basis, and at the same time relieve if possible the burdens of taxation. He said he believed that this end would come, if the legislators were faithless alike of the clamors of creditors and the wily importunities of speculators, and kept steadily in view the integrity of the State on the one hand, and on the other the prosperity of the people.

HENRY S. FOOTE has published a card saying he is enthusiastically in favor of the new political reform and reunion movement in Tennessee, but that he did not write the admirable address presented to him. He also says: "For twenty years past I have been the object of malevolent assault on the part of extremists of all factions. I have regarded this as decided by creditable to me. If the agitators of the day can be a little held in check by my efforts; if tranquillity and brotherhood can be once more established, shall care very little what may be said about my character or motive of acting by those who never discord to harmony, dissension to quiet, and the promotion of demagogues to high places of trust and dignity, to the elevation of statesmen of intelligence, of experience and true ability."

Mormon Difficulties—Sermons by Bishop Hulme and Rev. C. H. Sweetser.

Bishop HULME, from Utah, preached yesterday afternoon in the Mormon place of worship on Grand-street, Williamsburg. He spoke feelingly of the troubles in Utah, and of the "persecution" of BRIGHAM YOUNG by the Gentiles. He has been preaching through Virginia and Pennsylvania, and had found many warm friends but also many fierce enemies, and in several places he had been given fifteen minutes to leave the place. But wherever he went he told his hearers that if Mormonism was of man it would fall, but if it was of God it must stand in defiance even of the great might of the United States. He believed that it was of God as surely as he believed in his own existence, and fully expected that all the world would be made to know that the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof, and that He hath given it to His saints. But of one thing all might be certain, and that was that BRIGHAM YOUNG would obey the law, and suffer whatever punishment the Gentile [illegible] may [illegible] on him.

The Rev. Mr. SWEETSER preached on Mormons and Mormonism in the Plymouth-street Universalist Church last evening. He described the early settlement of Salt Lake City, and the untiring industry that had made the desert bloom like a garden, but said the most pressing and important duties to be discharged by the new administration, under circumstances of peculiar difficulty, is to preserve the good faith of the State by placing her credit upon a permanent basis, and at the same time relieve if possible the burdens of taxation. He said he believed that this end would come, if the legislators were faithless alike of the clamors of creditors and the wily importunities of speculators, and kept steadily in view the integrity of the State on the one hand, and on the other the prosperity of the people.

AMUSEMENTS.

Musical and Dramatic.

PROMISES OF TO-NIGHT.

This night's promise to the playgoer is unusually abundant. At the Academy of Music, "Don Giovanni" will be sung for the first time this season, Mme. PAREPA-ROSA, Mme. VAN KAMPT, Miss CLARA DOBIA, and Mr. TOM KARL all appearing in the opera. At Steinway Hall, Mrs. MOULTON will make her long-awaited debut as a professional songstress. At the Bowery Theatre Herr WACHTEL will repeat his personation of Edgardo in "Lucia di Lammermoor." At Lina Edwin's Theatre, now renamed and directed by Mlle. ADELE M. ALBERT JULIEN, a new tenor, will have his earliest hearing in this City. "La Perichole" remaining the opera. At BOOTH'S Miss CUSHMAN is to figure in "Macbeth." Mr. CRESWICK representing Macduff. At Wood's Museum, "The Octoroon" will be acted for the first time at this house. At the Union-square Theatre, Mr. M. W. LEFFINGWELL will come forth as Romeo Toffler Jenkins, the drollest picture in the exhibitor's gallery. The Globe Theatre offers an entertainment supplied by Miss ADAH RICHMOND'S burlesque company and by the whole troupe of the Boston Athenæum. The bills elsewhere are unchanged.

AID FOR CHICAGO.

The benefit representations in aid of Chicago are to occur as below: Today there will be matinées at the Fifth-avenue Theatre, the Olympic, and the Bowery. To-morrow matinées take place at the Grand Opera-house and Lina Edwin's; in the evening Herr BARNMANN will act at the Stadt Theatre. Wednesday day-performances may be attended at Niblo's and at the Union-square Theatre; in the evening Steinway Hall, where Mr. DOLBY'S artists are to sing for the fund, will be open to the people. Thursday matinées are advertised at Tony Pastor's Opera-house and at Mrs. Conway's Theatre in Brooklyn; in the evening, Wood's Museum and Booth's may be visited by the charitable. Friday, to close the series, a matinée by a host of artists, assembled for the occasion, will be given at the Grand Opera-house.

LIEDERKRANZ CHARITY.

The Liederkranz Society is making arrangements for a grand vocal and instrumental concert, the gross proceeds of which will be devoted to the Chicago relief fund. The concert will be given at Steinway Hall next Saturday.

ITALIAN OPERA.

The sale of seats for single nights of the Italian Opera season will commence at the Central Ticket Office, in the Everett House, on Thursday morning next.

HERR WACHTEL'S REPRESENTATIONS.

Herr WACHTEL sang in "Lucia di Lammermoor" on Saturday evening. The artist was not in as good voice as usual, and there was, on that account, more uneveness in his work than was anticipated. It was fortunate that the conspicuous numbers of the score are reserved for the close. We remember none of Herr WACHTEL'S personations but has shown an increased steadiness of tone and execution on the part of the singer, as it progressed, and his recital of "Fra poco," by its beauty and expressiveness, justified, Saturday, the hope entertained at the rather unpromising outset of the representation. Herr WACHTEL is to repeat his personation of the Master of Ravenswood to-night, whenit is to be desired that he may have full control of his resources. His acting, of course, was exceedingly earnest and effective, Saturday, and its impression was acknowledged by much enthusiasm. Miss PERSINI is to be complimented rather for intelligence and industry than for excellence in the rôle of Lucia. The part is one which Miss NILSSON, alone in this country, has the histrionic power—the question of vocalization being set aside—to fill satisfactorily.

ARION CONCERT.

A concert was given by the Arion Society last evening at their club-house in St. Mark's-place. It was very numerously attended, and it afforded, evidently, much pleasure. The programme, however, was not very eclectic, and we are not sure but that even the purely German audience would have approved occasional hospitality to foreign composers. The interpretation of the bill, of course, was thoroughly creditable. The faultlessness and suavity of the violin playing of Dr. LEOPOLD DAMROSCH has already been written of in these columns, and it is not too high praise to say that a more intellectual, refined, and finished delivery of BEETHOVEN'S "Kreutzer Sonata"—a work in which the technique of all the classical schools of the instrument must be drawn upon by the executant—could nowhere be enjoyed. How admirable the accompaniment to Dr. DAMROSCH'S performance may be inferred from the name of the accompanyist; Mr. S. B. MILLS was at the piano throughout the evening, and it was his interpretation of CHOPIN'S exquisite "Etude No. 5," and of TAUSSIG'S "Soirée de Vienne," that constituted the most generally appreciable part of the entertainment. The remainder of the selections consisted of songs by LACHNER, SCHUBERT, LISZT, RUBENSTEIN and DAMROSCH, the solos interpreted, by Frau HELENE DAMROSCH, whose singing is creditable in point of style and expressiveness, but whose voice is by no means sympathetic, and the concerted pieces by the choral forces of the Society, who show much improvement since the intelgago of Dr. DAMROSCH has commenced. The Rod by RUBENSTEIN was called "Bullum vinum nisi Hungaricum," and needed as an excuse for its rendering the authority of the composer's signature.

TWO NEW ARTISTS.

Two young ladies, whose reputation as musicians and executants, in Europe, is wide and stable, were heard for the first time in the United States last evening, at the Grand Opera-house. Mlle. CASTELLAN, and Mlle. DE TEY, the former a violinist and the latter a violoncellist, then took part in the concert given in aid of Chicago. They played a duet by BERNARD and VIEUXTEMPS, founded on motives from "Les Huguenots," and were at once recognized as possessed of sensibility, talent and taste in no common degree. More frequent hearings and a greater amount of space than is now at our disposal will enable us to speak with more detail of the gifts and accomplishments of these new-comers. For the present, we can only record their debut, adding that it is that of performers who have claims upon critical notice of a stronger kind than persons relying upon the curiosity of the public for artistic encouragement.

The Laborers on the Public Works.

From the Sunday News.

One of the most serious difficulties in which Tammany has involved the City, and the only one which gives us any great uneasiness and anxiety, is the possible necessity of throwing a great many laboring men out of employment just at the beginning of Winter. The Deputy Controller, Mr. GREEN, will do everything that lies within his power to obviate this necessity, but the City Treasury has been so completely stript of money by the extravagance, the frauds, and shameless plunderings of the Tammany Ring, that it may not be in the power of the City to retain in its pay any large number of the laborers on the public works.

While no one is justly blamable for this but the Ring, who have put into their own pockets, and the pockets of their friends, the money intended for the laborers, the evil consequences of the fact fall upon the laborers and their families, and may incite them to acts of lawless violence. Men who have been deprived of the means of furnishing their wives and children with shelter and fuel, food and clothing, during a severe Northern Winter, are not apt to consider too carefully upon whom the blame should be put, and are too ready to be made the tools of designing men.

Tammany has given many hints of its purpose to [illegible] a great advance over the old style of china ornaments, which always look cheap and common. Passing a lady artist who is busily at work sketching some of the newest designs in ornaments for the table, we are shown a superb vase, on which the designs, comprising some fifty figures, are all formed by the metal being beaten outwards. The effect is exceedingly good, the figures being boldly defined. Near by are some very small figures in white metal, two duellists, and a cousin of jockeys preparing for the course. They are so graceful and natural in attitude, the small faces are so strong and truthful in expression, and every detail, from the sword knot to the handle of the riding-whip, is so exquisitely elaborated that they look like figures that have started from the canvas of MEISSONNIER.

Of smaller articles, of every variety of style and design, from the antique to the modern, and in every kind of metal, from copper and brass to silver and gold, there is no end, and we leave the neat establishment with a profound conviction that the purchaser who cannot suit himself here must be hard indeed to please.

Installation Services—Certain Punishment of Corrupt Rulers.

Rev. W. W. NEWELL, Jr., was, last night, installed as pastor of the Forty-second-street Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Dr. HATFIELD presided. Rev. S. D. BURCHARD, D. D., preached the sermon for the occasion, Rev. W. W. NEWELL, D. D., father of the new minister, made the charges to the pastor and Rev. JAMES O. MURRAY, D. D., the charge to the people. Dr. BURCHARD, during his discourse, which was upon the importance and necessity of preaching, made reference to our municipal corruption. "See," he said, "how the community is shaken by loss of confidence in the integrity of our rulers. They have been using the people's money for their own aggrandisement; but they will be punished. They may continue in their frauds, and dazzle with the splendor of their ill-gotten gains; but they will be brought to punishment. The wicked will be punished.

Installation, at the Presbyterian Memorial Church.

Last evening Rev. C. S. ROBINSON, D. D., was installed as pastor of the Presbyterian Memorial Church in Fifty-fifth-street. Rev. S. I. PRIME presided, and put the usual questions to Dr. ROBINSON. The sermon was delivered by Rev. T. S. HASTINGS, and a charge to the pastor was given by Rev. J. K. WILSON, in which he was exhorted to be faithful to the trust reposed in him. The charge to the people was delivered by Rev. J. D. WILSON, who reminded his hearers that a congregation has duties to perform as well as its pastor; that a faithful congregation makes a faithful pastor, and that when the former become slack in the performance of their duties, the latter often becomes so too.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The extensive and important list of sales for the week published below precludes us from dwelling upon the present status of the market, or in fact from giving anything but a brief summary of the business of the past week. The list of recent transfers is also necessarily omitted, but should space permit they will be inserted to-morrow. For the week ending with Saturday, Oct. 14, the total value of City real estate disposed of at the Exchange amounts to $62,225, as against $85,175 for the week ending Saturday, Oct. 7. The sales made have nearly all been of a legal nature, and Thursday, Oct. 12, was the only day that any business was transacted. In suburban auctions JOHNSON & MILLER sold at Richmond Hill, Long Island, on Thursday, 100 lots at very satisfactory figures, the total receipts reaching $18,000; and at Newark, N. J., on the same day, A. D. MELLICK, Jr., sold at auction some forty lots, situated respectively on Frelinghuysen and other avenues, at an average price of $480 per lot. No other events worthy of notice have occurred, with the exception of private sales effected, which have been from day to day reported. The market has been particularly quiet for the season of the year, but with the close of business this week we confidently expect to report a manifest improvement.

PROPOSED SALES THIS WEEK.

For the present week the auctions projected are more numerous than usual, and the market should be active. The following is a list of the sales to take place, and on the days noted property will be offered as specified by the auctioneers respectively named.

Today, Monday, Oct. 16.

By MULLER, WILKINS & Co., at the Exchange, at public auction, ten four-story and basement brick stores and tenements, located on the east side of Third avenue, commencing on the south-east corner of One Hundred and Eighth-street. Lots in size, five 17.8 by 76, and five 17.8 by 100; buildings about 54 feet each in depth. The same firm will also offer for sale a four-story brick double tenement house and lot in rear of above, situate on the south side of One Hundred and Eighth-street, 75 feet east of Third-avenue; lot 26 by 88.6; house 25 by 50. In addition will be offered at public auction three first-class three-story high-stoop brick houses and lots known as Nos. 220, 222 and 224 East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth-street, south side, between Second and Third avenues; lots in size, each 20 by 99.11; houses each about 40 feet deep.

By JOSEPH MCGUIRE, at the Exchange, by order of the Supreme Court, in foreclosure, under the direction of E. C. THAYER, Esq., referee, a house and lot on the north side of Fifty-first-street, 150 feet east of Seventh-avenue, lot in size 16 by 100.

By JAMES M. MILLER, at the Exchange, also under a Supreme Court foreclosure order, RICHARD C. BEAMISH, Esq., referee, (sale adjourned from last week,) two lots, with the buildings thereon, located on the east side of Centre-street, 84 feet south of Essex-street, lots together form a plot in size 44.7 by 73.6 by 44.3 by 80.

By JOHNSON & MILLER, at College Point, Long Island, on the ground at 12 M., 200 desirable building lots, sold absolutely and without reserve, by direction of the heirs of the Stratton estate. The property offered is well located, with an extensive and valuable water front, and should bring good figures. Special train via James-slip and Thirty-fourth-street Ferries at 11 A. M.

Tuesday, Oct. 17.

By MULLER, WILKINS & Co., at the Exchange, by order of the executor of LUCIUS CHITTENDEN, deceased, the following valuable City realty: Three and a half story high-stoop brown-stone house and lot, No. 29 West Fifteenth-street, north side, near Fifth-avenue, lot 25 by 102.3, house 45 feet in depth, with extension. Also, three and a half story high-stoop brown-stone houses and lot, No. 32 East Nineteenth-street, south side, near Broadway, lot 22 by 92, house 55 feet deep. Also, five three-story high-stoop brick houses and lots, situate on the south side of West Twenty-sixth-street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, known as Nos. 284, 286, 288, 290 and 292, lots each in size 20 by 98.9, houses each about 60 feet deep. The same firm will, in addition, offer at public auction four three-story high-stoop Philadelphia-brick-front houses and lots, located on the north side of One Hundred and Twentieth-street, 250 feet west of Avenue A; premises each 18.9 by 85 by 100.10. Also, the property No. 18 East Sixteenth-street, south side, seven doors west of Union-square, known as the Allemania Club-house, embracing a plot of ground 37.6 by 172.6, with a four-story brick building thereon, nearly covering the same.

By E. H. LUDLOW & Co., at the Exchange, at public auction, two first-class three-story and basement French roof brown-stone front dwelling and lots on the north-east corner of Fourth-avenue and Sixtieth-street, known as Nos. 101 and 103. Lots each 20 feet by half block. Houses about 50 feet in depth. Also the four-story basement and cellar high-stoop brown-stone house and lot No. 41 East Twenty-second-street, between Broadway and Fourth-avenue. Premises 20 by 98 by 99.4.

By M. A. J. LYNCH & HUGH N. CAMP, at the Exchange, at public auction, a valuable dock property, fronting on Harlem River and lying between One Hundred and Nineteenth and One Hundred and Twentieth streets. The frontage on the river to be disposed of is 250 feet. The property will be sold in two parcels, one containing 150 feet and the other eight fifty lots.

By ALLEN & BROWN, at the Exchange, by order of the trustees of Mount Sinai Hospital, the property now occupied by that institution, located on the south side of West Twenty-eighth-street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues, embracing a large four-story brick building, with plot of ground about fifty feet front, running through to Twenty-seventh-street, thus having a depth of 200 feet.

By JAMES M. MILLER, at the Exchange, by order of the Supreme Court, in foreclosure, under the direction of JOHN C. BUSHNELL, Esq., referee, the three-story and basement brick house and lot—lot 16.8 by 42 by 100.4—No. 516 West Forty-third-street; also, under a similar order, THOS. H. LANDON, Esq., referee, a house and lot on the north side of Seventeenth-street, 346 feet east of First-avenue. The same auctioneer, at Wilbur's Hotel, Tottenville, Staten Island, will to-morrow, in addition dispose of a farm of fifty acres, with buildings thereon; the sale is also one in foreclosure, under the direction of ROBERT BUTHERLAND, Esq., referee.

By JOSEPH MCGUIRE, at the Exchange, at two separate foreclosure sales, both under the direction of JAMES H. COLEMAN, Esq., referee, the following property: A house and lot, the latter 20 by 70, on the west side of Lexington-avenue, 25 feet 6 inches north of Fifty-eighth-street, and a house and lot on the south side of Thirty-sixth-street, 379 feet west of Eighth-avenue. The last-named property is known as No. 322 West Thirty-sixth-street, and embraces a three-story and basement high-stoop brick house, in size 22 by 98, with lot 22 by 98.9.

By JOHNSON & MILLER, at Yonkers, Westchester County, on the ground at 12 M., 100 very beautifully located villa plots, forming a portion of the property known as the Blackwell Estate, and situated in one of the best and most improved sections of the town named. The sale is announced will be positive and absolute in every particular, and from the intrinsic value of the lots themselves, the proposed transaction is certain to attract among those interested in the disposition of Westchester County property a full description of the lots offered is unnecessary, for the advantages presented have been fully pointed out in the extended notice of the sale published for ten days past. Suffice it to say that the property is, in all respects, such as it has been represented, being finely situated, near the City, in a good neighborhood, and in the midst of first-class improvements, while the liberal manner in which the sale has been advertised should aid in bringing about a most unqualified success. Special train for auction from Thirtieth-street, Hudson River Road, at 10½ o'clock. Tickets to be obtained of auctioneers, No. 36 Nassau-street.

Wednesday, Oct. 18.

By S. DIBOLL, at the Exchange, at public auction, the first-class three story high-stoop brick dwelling house and lot No. 260 West Twenty-third-street, south side, 100 feet east of Ninth-avenue; house in size, 25 by 56; lot, 25 by 98.9.

By JOSEPH MCGUIRE, at the Exchange, under a Supreme Court order in foreclosure, D. P. INGRAHAM, Jr., Esq., referee, the five-story and cellar brick tenement-house (with stores) and lot known as No. 211 Delancey-street, between Pitt and Ridge streets; lot in size 25 by 75; house, 55 feet in depth.

By JAMES M. MILLER, at the Exchange, by order of the Supreme Court in foreclosure, under the direction of CHAS. A. JACKSON, Esq., referee, one lot on the south side of Fortieth-street, 176 feet west of Eighth-avenue, and at another similar legal sale, under the direction of RICHARD C. BEAMISH, Esq., referee, a lot on the south side of Thirty-eighth-street, 371 feet 6 inches east of Tenth-avenue.

Thursday, Oct. 19.

By MULLER, WILKINS & Co., at the Exchange, at public auction, valuable Brooklyn property, sold by order of the New-York Warehousing Company, consisting of about sixty-five lots of land, together with eight brick storehouses, three piers, bulkhead and water rights, situate at the foot of Van Brunt-street, opposite the Erie basin, Brooklyn, and known as the New-York Warehousing Company's stores and basin.

The same firm will also sell at public auction the following New-York real estate: Two six-story Philadelphia brick-front stores and dwellings and lots, situate on the east side of Sixth-avenue, between Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets, known as Nos. 488 and 490. On the rear of No. 488 is a four-story brick house, and on the rear of No. 490 a three-story brick store and brick stable. The lots are of extra size, and the property is now rented for $61,000 per annum. Also the first-class four-story English basement brick house and lot, situate on the north side of West Twenty-eighth-street, about 100 feet east of Sixth-avenue, No. 47. House, 56 feet deep; lot, 25 by 98.9. Also the plot of land, together with the three-story brick factory building thereon, situate on the south side of West Thirty-third-street, 225 feet east of Eleventh-avenue, Nos. 542, 544 and 546. The property is valuable for manufacturing purposes, and is within one block of the new Manhattan Market. Engine, boiler, shafting, steam elevator, safes, fire-hose, &c., sold with premises.

By JOHN M. HILLER, at the Exchange, under a Supreme Court order, MAURICE B. FIELD, Esq., referee, fifty unimproved City lots and parts of land, located as follows: Two lots and one gore south-west corner of Avenue A and Eighty-fifth-street; one gore lot south side of Eighty-fifth-street, commencing 75 feet west of Avenue A; also three lots south side of Eighty-fifth-street, commencing 140 feet west of Avenue A; seven lots and one gore west side of Avenue B, between Eighty-fourth and Eighty-fifth streets; two lots south side of Eighty-fifth-street, commencing 96 feet west of Avenue B; sixteen gore lots between Eighty-fourth and Eighty-fifth streets, Avenues A and B; four lots west side of Avenue B, commencing north-west corner of Eighty-fifth-street; two lots north side of Eighty-fifth-street, commencing 96 feet west of Avenue B; and six lots south side of Eighty-sixth-street, commencing south-west corner of Avenue B.

By E. J. BLEECKER, SON & Co., at the Exchange, at public auction, the three-story and basement high-stoop brick house and lot No. 127 West Twenty-sixth-street, north side, between Sixth and Seventh avenues. Lot 21.10 by 98.8. House 50 feet deep.

By R. R. HAZARD, Jr., at Orange, N. J., on the ground, at 11 A. M., sixty-three cottage lots in Orange Valley and thirty-three villa plots on Orange Mountain, all handsomely located, and worthy the attention of investors. The sale which was expected to occur last week, and noticed accordingly on Monday last, was adjourned by reason of the inclemency of the weather. Trains leave Hoboken ferry for last week's auction (sold good for this special trading) from foot of Barclay-streets, via Jersey City, and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railway, at 10 o'clock. Tickets at office of auctioneer, No. 119 Broadway, corner Pine-street.

By JOHNSON & MILLER, at Inglewood, (Queens,) Long Island, on the premises, at 12 M., 300 desirable lots in the immediate vicinity of the railway station, and fronting on the road to Jericho, and on the road leading from Jamaica to Hempstead. The terms of sale are liberal, and from the success attending the auction sale of lots at this place a few weeks since, it is probable that an equally satisfactory result will be achieved on Thursday. Special train via James'-slip and Thirty-fourth-street ferries at 11 o'clock.

By S. E. CONEY, at Altura, Bookiar County, on the ground, at 12 M., a large number of lots belonging to the People's College property, the greater portion of proceeds received from the sale being donated to the College and Home, under the direction of the Order of the Good Samaritans. Special train via Northern New-Jersey Railroad at 9 A. M., by ferry from foot of Chambers-street. Tickets for same can be procured of the auctioneer, at his office, No. 7 Warren-street, this City.

Friday, Oct. 20.

By JOSEPH MCGUIRE, at the Exchange, by order of the Supreme Court in foreclosure, at five several sales respectively under the direction of Messrs. D. P. INGRAHAM, Jr., and JAMES H. COLEMAN, referees, the following New-York property: House and lot—the latter 20 by 70—on the west side of Fourth-avenue, 22 feet 2 inches north of Eighty-fifth-street, and a house and lot —latter 20 by 100—on the south side of Forty-third-street, 100 feet west of Third-avenue.

By JAS. M. MILLER, at the Exchange, at a Supreme Court foreclosure sale, JOHN C. BUSHNELL, Esq., referee, a lot of land on the north-east corner of Tenth-avenue and Sixty-seventh-street.

The sale last noted will conclude the business of the week, as for the proposed transactions have been brought to our notice, but should any sales have escaped our attention, upon being apprised of the fact they will be duly attended to.

THE FENIANS.

Another Attack on the Raiders by United States Troops.

Thirteen Prisoners Captured—Preparations of the Dominion Government for Defense—Details of the Recent Movement.

THE FENIAN RAID.

A Second Attack on the Raiders by United States Troops—Thirteen Prisoners Taken—The Canadians Sending More Troops.

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—The United States troops attacked the Fenians a second time in the vicinity of Pembina and scattered them, taking thirteen prisoners. It is the intention of the Government, as a precautionary measure, at once to dispatch a strong force to Fort Garry. Five companies of volunteers are now being organized in Manitoba under the militia law. Manitoba and British Columbia have been created military districts.

TORONTO, Oct. 15.—Last evening Col. DURIE received a telegram from Ottawa instructing him to procure from his district twenty-five men, fully fitted, equipped and clothed, to proceed immediately to Fort Garry. Lieut.-Col. DENISON, Brigade-Major, has been instructed to proceed to Collingwood, at which place troops will muster, and organize the several detachments as they arrive. Troops are to move as they can be got ready. The following is from a gentleman just arrived from St. Paul, Minn.:

"The Fenian Gen. O'NEILL was at St. Paul on Saturday last, selling tickets for a lecture on Monday night. At that time there were no manifestations of a military character, though a few suspicious-looking persons were loitering about. If the lecture was delivered, the capture story is of course untrue. Col. WHEATON, United States commander at Pembina, had eighty men. Nothing had been heard at Pembina up to Monday of any raids, though information was received of such had taken place. O'DONOHUE has a number of men at St. Joe, chiefly discharged navvies from the Northern Pacific Railway, among whom he has been acting for some time. Arms have no doubt been secreted on the border for some months. He expected to be able to effect a lodgment across the line. RIEL had a meeting in a church at White Horse Plains two weeks ago, at which he bitterly denounced the Government for their alleged bad faith in still refusing a full amnesty. He told the French half-breeds to break off their connection with Canada. No Canadians were admitted to this meeting, which filled the church."

THE FENIANS IN MANITOBA.

How They Captured the Hudson Bay Post and its Garrison of Three Men and One Woman—And How They Afterward Fled From the United States Troops.

St. Paul (Minn.) papers bring full particulars of the Fenian raid into Manitoba, and the capture and occupation of the Hudson Bay Company's Fort at North Pembina by Gen. O'NEIL, on the morning of the 5th inst. The Pioneer says:

"There had been considerable excitement at Fort Garry for several days, on account of the rumored movements of the Fenians. When our informant reached the Custom-house, he received the first information of the raid. Mr. DOUGLAS, the assistant Custom-house officer, was alarmed early in the morning by a half-breed, who informed him that a body of men, numbering about forty, was marching down. Mr. DOUGLAS went to the door, and, when coming, awoke Mr. WEBSTER, and then DOUGLAS started across the prairie to alarm the Hudson Bay post. He was pursued by Gen. O'DONOHUE and another man on horseback, who presented revolvers at his head and ordered him back. He told them he would not go back, and demanded by what authority they acted. He said he should not obey them until they gave him their authority. O'DONOHUE then replied he acted under the authority of the Provisional Government of Manitoba. The Fenians then marched down, and took the Hudson Bay post. They were only seeking an old man and his wife, Mr. WATT, a one-armed Hudson Bay official, and Mr. SCOTT, his clerk. The Fenians seized all the provisions and made selections of clothing for themselves, and other articles, and started one load of provisions down the river. The prisoners were allowed the liberty of the yard and verandahs of the buildings, but were not permitted to go outside the stockade.

The Fenians arrested a half-breed American citizen on the road to Pembina, who was subsequently released by them, upon being informed of the fact. Messrs. DOUGLAS and WEBSTER, without the knowledge of the Fenians, gave the half-breed a note to Col. WHEATON, commandant of the United States troops at Fort Pembina, informing him of the situation of affairs, and asking assistance. In a very short time, Capt. WHEATON, at the head of thirty men, appeared upon the scene. Capt. WHEATON sent his color-bearer ahead to inquire of Gen. O'NEIL the object of his raid. The Color Sergeant was escorted to the presence of O'NEIL at the point of the bayonet, as a prisoner. Before the soldier could explain his mission, some of the Fenians on the outside of the stockade came rushing in, exclaiming, "The American troops are coming." Immediately there was a general stampede at the Fenians, pursued by the United States soldiers. O'DONOHUE, on going outside, found one of his men, an Indian (O'DONOHUE's) horse, but he was immediately knocked off, when O'DONOHUE mounted and fled with others who had horses, taken from half-breeds. Many of them threw away their arms as they ran. Those who were on foot took to the brush along the river. The troops fired a volley at the mounted Fenians, but it was believed no one was injured. Capt. WHEATON witnessing the flight of the Fenians, mounted a horse, drew his pistols and pursued them some distance ahead of his men. He came up to O'NEIL, DONNELLY and CARLEY, and arrested them without resistance, and ten of the rank and file. Gen. O'NEIL was in vain seen hastening to get away from the post, that he left his sword on a table; O'DONOHUE left his repeating rifle, cloak, &c. Col. WHEATON also captured about 300 stand of arms, 250 being breech-loaders, and 7,000 rounds of ammunition. He also sent a force and recaptured the provisions which the Fenians were sending away. The prisoners were taken to Fort Pembina, and confined in the barracks. Gen. O'NEIL took his capture very philosophically. On being put into an ambulance he took out his pipe and smoked during the short ride to the Fort.

Another party of Fenians had appeared in the neighborhood of St. Joe, but Capt. WHEATON was aware of their movements, and sent a cavalry to capture or disperse them. The absence of this force of cavalry prevented the capture of the whole party under O'NEIL.

Our informant states that the Manitoban authorities have received most positive assurances that the French half-breeds would sustain the Government in the present crisis. The Governor's proclamation was responded to by a general uprising of the people, irrespective of former affiliations. They also report that it would take several thousand men, without artillery, to capture Fort Garry.

As usual, the rank and file of the Fenians denounce the incompetency of their leaders. Some of them assert that O'NEIL is more desirous of notoriety than of performing substantial services to the cause, and that he openly connived at the capture of his force. Our informants, however, are not able to vouch for the truth of these aspersions upon Gen. O'NEIL, and express no opinions thereon. They believe, however, that the raid was badly planned, and will amount to nothing. The capture of the leaders, with their arms, ammunition, and stores at the outset of the campaign, is probably fatal to the enterprise.

THE GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION.

The proclamation of the Governor, issued on the 3d, two days before the raid, and alluded to in the above, is given by the Press as follows:

PROCLAMATION.

Province of Manitoba.

VICTORIA, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, [Seal] Defender of the Faith, &c., &c., &c.

(Signed,) ADAMS GEO. ARCHIBALD.

To our loving subjects, the inhabitants of the Province of Manitoba, greeting:

Whereas, intelligence has just been received from trustworthy sources, that a band of lawless men, calling themselves Fenians, have assembled on the frontier line of the United States, in the neighborhood of Pembina, and that they intend to make a raid into this Province from a country with which we are at peace, and to commit acts of depredation, pillage and robbery, and other outrages upon the persons and property of our loving subjects, the inhabitants of the Province:

While not unprepared to meet the emergency with our regular forces, we do hereby warn all our said loving subjects to put themselves in readiness at once to assist in repelling the entrance upon their hearths and homes. We enjoin them immediately to assemble in their respective parishes, and enroll themselves for this purpose. We call upon all our said loving subjects, irrespective of race or religion, or of past local differences, to rally round the flag of our common country. We enjoin them to select the best men of each locality to be officers, whom we shall duly authorize and commission, and we enjoin the officers so selected to put themselves in immediate communication with the Lieutenant-Governor of our said Province. We shall take care that persons possessed of military skill and experience shall be detailed to teach the necessary drill and discipline. All officers and men called into service shall receive the like allowances given to the regular militia. The country need feel no alarm. We are quite able to repel these outlaws if they were numerous. The handful of them who threaten us can give no serious difficulty to the brave men who have their homes and families to defend.

Rally, then, at once! We rely upon the prompt response of all our people, of every origin, in this our hour of need.

In testimony whereof, we have caused these our letters to be made patent, and the great seal of Manitoba to be hereunto affixed. Witness our trusty and well-beloved, the Honorable ADAMS GEORGE ARCHIBALD, Lieutenant-Governor of our Province of Manitoba, member of our Privy Council for Canada, &c., &c., at our Government House at Fort Garry, this 3d day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and in the thirty-fifth year of our reign.

By command, THOS. HOWARD,
Provincial Secretary.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Actual Amount of Government Funds in the Chicago Custom-House—Vigorous Measures Against Corruption—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The Government funds in the vaults of the Custom-house at Chicago, which are now reported melted as to coin, and consumed as to greenbacks, are exaggerated in amount. The gold, now melted into bullion, was a little over half a million, while the greenbacks were at last report, a little upward of one million. The gold will reappear in coinage loss a slight percentage, but it is doubtful if the greenbacks will ever reappear, notwithstanding the prohibition against contraction, as there never can be any legal record of the identity of the currency destroyed. As the Government owned the currency there is no loss to any one, only so much enforced contraction. It will not vary the debt statement, as it is taken out of the liabilities by the fire, but likewise out of the cash on hand.

ROOTING OUT CORRUPTION.

It is a very significant fact that there has not been a time within the past ten years when the energies of the Government were being bent with greater vigor to the enforcement of the laws and the ripping up and rooting out of corruption in all quarters than at present. The October terms of the United States Courts opened with a pungent notification from the law officers of the Government to "press things all along the line," and it is being rigorously done. The order is to spare nobody, friend or foe, who comes under the ban of the law, so that whether it be KLUKism in the South, polygamy in Utah, or fraud and corruption in the public service and in individual "rings," it is being pursued with the same unrelenting rigor. The results are rapidly becoming apparent, and will soon attract national attention.

The total contributions of the school children of Washington for the Chicago sufferers reach $1,250 in money and thirty cases of clothing.

THE WHITE STOCKINGS PENNILESS.

Mr. NICHOLAS E. YOUNG, Secretary of the Olympic Base-Ball Club of this city, yesterday received a letter from Capt. WOOD, of the Chicago White Stockings, in which he asks a withdrawal of all contracts made with players, as his club has been rendered penniless by the late fire in that city. FORCE, ALLISON, and YOUNG were to have played in the White Stockings next season.

PERSONAL.

Among the arrivals in the city are Senator CAMERON, of Wisconsin; Representative WINANS, of Ohio, and Representative NEGLEY, of Pennsylvania. Among the pleasant bits of gossip which have reached here is the fact that at the recent Cleveland County Fair, Tennessee, Mrs. D. T. PATTERSON, daughter of Ex-President JOHNSON, formerly first lady at the White House, took the first premium for the best butter.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

THE NAVAL COURTESIES TO THE RUSSIAN PRINCE.

It was yesterday stated in naval official circles that unless the royal standard shall be displayed, the salute from our vessels will be to the Russian Admiral, as the Grand Duke ALEXIS is a mere Lieutenant. But should the royal standard be hoisted, the prescribed salute will be fired. According to the regulations, a member of a royal family, when visiting a vessel of our navy, shall receive the same honors as would be paid to his Sovereign, except that one salute only shall be paid on leaving. A foreign Sovereign, or the Chief Magistrate of any foreign republic, shall be received with the same honors prescribed for the President, except that the flag of his own country shall be displayed at the main, and the band play his own national air. The salute is twenty-one guns.

LEGALITY OF THE SENTENCE OF MAJOR HODGES.

Some doubt having been expressed as to the legality of the sentence of the Court-martial in the case of Pay-master HODGES, imposing upon him the punishment of imprisonment in a penitentiary, it may be stated that full authority for such sentences is found in the act of July 3, 1864, chapter 225, section 10, which provides that any officer, soldier, seaman or marine, who shall commit certain crimes, among which is embezzlement, may be sentenced by a Court-martial to punishment in a penitentiary. The general legality of Court-martial sentences to a penitentiary is also established or recognised, by not less than five other acts of Congress, a decision of the Supreme Court, and several opinions of Attorneys-General BLACK, BATES, and EVARTS.

THE FIRES IN MICHIGAN.

Destruction at Manistee—Loss Over a Million Dollars Above Insurance.

From the Detroit Post, Oct. 14.

The fire which broke out in the premises north-east of Manistee, last week, had nearly subsided when, on Saturday, a heavy gale sprung up from the southward, driving the flames and cinders toward GIFFORD & RUDDOCK'S mills. This the Fire Company checked, but on Sunday evening a fire broke out near CANFIELD'S mill, which is situated at the mouth of the river. In less than half an hour the mill, together with about twenty dwelling-houses and boarding-houses, were totally consumed. A hill intervening between this and the town, the fire could run no further, and people were already congratulating themselves upon the narrow escape of Manistee, when a bright light was noticed north-east from the people where a number of dwellings were found to be in flames. The fire spread rapidly until it had destroyed almost the whole of the business portion of the town, including nearly all the stores and sawmills. The schooner Season Chief, which was loaded with hay and grain, was burned to the water's edge. The swing-bridge was also destroyed. Both sides of Main-street, for a distance of five blocks, were burned over, and almost everything on the north side of the river was destroyed. The number of dwellings burned, and the number of families houseless is not as large as stated yesterday, although some 1,500 or 1,800 people have been driven out of their homes. Many of those whose houses still remain are without the means of support for the present, as their work and wages depended entirely upon the existence of the mills which were destroyed. The bank and shoe-shop, rendered familiar to most of our readers in the State by the Vanderpool trials, were among the buildings burned. The residence of VANDERPOOL, since his arrest bought and remodeled by Dr. SWING, was destroyed, as were also the residence of D. D. HUGGINS, the house and office of Gen. LUTCHENS, and the mills of Magill & Canfield, Tyson & Robinson, Green & Milmore, Cushman & Co., Libben & Co. and others. The Manistee Standard was also burned out. The total loss is estimated at $1,500,000, on which the insurance is said to be no more than $750,000, although the exact figures on the insurance cannot be immediately ascertained.

On account of the comparative isolation from other thickly settled portions of the State, and its almost entire dependence on the lumber interests which are crippled by this fire, Manistee will suffer much more than almost any other town in the State would with only the same proportionate amount of money loss.

Mr. CANFIELD, of Manistee, in a letter to Mr. ENGELMANN, of Milwaukee, asking aid for the citizens of Manistee, says: "We have had a fearful time. I am satisfied that except for my cleared farm and grass land, over 2,000 people must have perished in spite of all that could have been done. We were circled in with a wall of fire, and the storm on the lake shut off all hope of escape. Even the shore of the lake was a sheet of flame."

The appeal for aid from those suffering is already meeting with a generous response from Grand Rapids and this city, and should be still more effective.

Further Reports from the Lake Huron Shore—Piteous Tales of Suffering.

Correspondence of the Detroit Post.

PORT HURON, Oct. 12, 1871.

Measuring the quality of the suffering rather than the quantity, add proportioning the number of people involved in loss and destruction of life and property, I venture to say these this eastern shore of Michigan, in the counties of Huron and Sanilac, has been visited with a calamity surpassing that of Chicago. Port Huron is already a hospital for the maimed and an asylum for the destitute. Thompson's Hall, a long, low attic in a wooden building on Sixth-street, is the rendezvous of the poor wretches brought in here from the north in tugs, steam-boats and scows. Thence, after their primary necessities are attended to they are distributed to the care of private families. Last night I visited this hall. Three or four bedsteads had been put up, and half a dozen or more straw beds were laid on the floor. On these were stretched, in rows, thirty or forty people, being the last gang of wretchedness brought into the town. Men, women, and children, the latter ranging from a dozen years of age to the sucking babe, were lying in rows. They were nearly all in sound sleep; worried out in their prolonged exertions in fighting the fire, in fleeing from it, in standing in the cold water of the lake up to their necks hour after hour. Several of them apparently were kept awake by their pain; their hands or fingers, or eyes or ears were bandaged, the fire having often blistered them, and in some cases burned their feet to a crisp. The effect of the smoke upon the eyes and lungs is particularly severe. One man from White Rock, connected with Thompson's mills at that place, was driven with his wife and four children into the lake. The wife and three of the children were "safe;" that is, up to their necks in the water, but he found that his eldest girl had been separated from him and was standing upon the dock at the water's edge. The dead was on fire, and the living were perishing near. He was forced to crawl through the smoke and flame, partly on land and partly in the water. He at last reached her and brought her away. As the fire died down they crawled upon the shore again and sat there hungry, wet, blinded by the smoke, and so exhausted that they could not stand. The afternoon Forum, at last search and took them off, but for thirty hours they were unable to open their eyes, while a terrible soreness still affects their lungs. This in detail is the experience of hundreds of others.

At Forrestville the catastrophe was similar to that at White Rock. There was no hint at midnight of the impending disaster, but shortly after a strong, howling, roaring current was heard and seen, fifty feet high, leaping from stump to stump, from house to house, until, in an incredibly short space of time, the whole village was in flames. The fire followed close upon the track of the fugitives until they reached the lake. The boarders at the hotel had scarcely time to escape from their beds. The very air seemed to be on fire.

From the interior people are constantly coming to the shore of the lake, driven like cattle by the pitiless, ferocious fire. The destruction of life for the space of thirty miles in the interior back from the shore no one dares estimate. The bridges are everywhere burned, so that escape at present for those living in the interior seems almost impossible. Dead bodies, burned to a crisp have already been found, and buried with as much care as the fugitives from the same fate could give them. A little heap of sand constitutes a grave, when the sextons are themselves in a headlong flight from death. One woman at White Rock sent her five children forward to the lake shore through a line of burning," and she followed them almost immediately, but could not find them. The fire drove her forward into the lake, and it is believed that the children all perished in the flames.

THE DEMANDS OF THE OCCASION.

The Counties of Huron and Sanilac, which constitute the principal scene of the fire, contain about 24,000 inhabitants. Of these it is believed that 10,000 are already rendered homeless. They have lost their houses, their barns, their stock, their mills, even their clothing. Some of them almost literally have to commence the world over again, being nearly as naked as when they were born. Port Huron are in constant receipt of messages asking for provisions and clothing, and the victims of the fire are still flocking in from the interior to the towns on the shore. The citizens of this city are doing all in their power to aid them, giving up their business in many cases to engage in the work of charity, but the burden ought not to fall upon them alone. As the drouth continues and the fires still burn the loss of life and property is destined to be still greater and the burden will increase. A long, hard Winter for these people who have lost everything is their hopeless prospect, unless and, systematic and prolonged, be at once organized in their behalf. Already the towns of Lexington, New River, Sand Beach, Huron City, a portion of Port Hope, Crescent, Centre Harbor, Elm Creek, White Rock, Paris, Cracow, Minden, Forrestville, and the Polish settlement near Forrestville, have been destroyed—those on the lake to the very water's edge, as the docks, in many instances, have been swept away. These towns represent a population of at least 10,000 people. The loss of property in these towns amounts directly, without doubt, from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000, at a very low calculation, and not including lumber and timber destroyed. The vaguest guess-work only could estimate the total loss of property in the interior. Some of the people burned out of house and home were substantial farmers, showing that the fire has swept over the cleared and cultivated districts, as well as through the woods.

The Queen's Cup Races.

All arrangements are now concluded for the international yacht races, and at 10 A. M. today the Livonia and the selected representative of the New-York Yacht Club will sail the first match. The Columbia, Dauntless, Sappho and Palmer have all received orders to be prepared to start, but it is generally understood that, unless it should blow a gale of wind, the Columbia will be honored with the first race. The measurements of the competing yachts are as follows:

Livonia—Displacement, 6,651; apportionment, 1,583.

Columbia—Displacement, 4,861; apportionment, 1,694.

Palmer—Displacement, 4,864; apportionment, 1,669.

Sappho—Displacement, 7,431; apportionment, 1,961.

Dauntless—Displacement, 7,124; apportionment, 1,894.

The tug steamer will leave the foot of Desbrosses-street at 9 A. M.

Reformed Dutch Church Centennial.

Centennial services were held in all of the Reformed Dutch Churches yesterday. In the evening, Rev. A. R. THOMPSON delivered a discourse in the St. Paul Reformed Church, in Forteeth-street, near Sixth-avenue, giving a history of the Church and tracing it from the Reformation. The anniversary which is celebrated is that of the establishment in this country, in 1771, of a classis to which was given the government of the Church in this country. Collections were taken up, morning and evening, for the sufferers in Chicago.

The Reformed Church was organized under a Presbyterian form of government and with an apostolic creed at Emboden, a sea-port in North Holland, in 1554. What it suffered, how it "maintained," through what incredible difficulties and dangers that Church has passed, DAVIES and GRATTAN and SCHILLER and MOTLEY have told with an eloquence inflamed with admiration of a people who proved themselves willing to part with everything save their civil rights and their religious liberties.

The Board for selecting an arm for the National Guard of this State have nearly completed their labors. The Allin gun was represented as Springfield, Mass., before this Board, by Messrs. ROOT & CROMPTON, in person, attorneys of the famous Ingersoll, of Ring notoriety, proving what we have always said, that this gun was a Ring job from the start. The first day's trial the Allin gun broke down entirely.

BROOKLYN.

WILLIAM BENNETT, a shoe-maker, doing business at No. 107 Boerum-street, had a quarrel with his son BENJAMIN on Saturday night, in the course of which he seized a knife and plunged it into his son's arm. The father was arrested.

Fire broke out at about 12 o'clock on Saturday night in the marble-works of JOHN O'HARA, at No. 67 Boerum-street, and damaged the establishment to the extent of $650. Before being extinguished the flames passed to an adjoining stable, owned by Mr. CROOKSHANK, and burned it to the ground, killing a horse worth $300. No insurance.

A new Moravian church in Brooklyn has just been completed, and was dedicated yesterday morning. It is in Jay-street, near Myrtle-avenue, and is a handsome and compact structure. The pastor is Rev. EDWARD BONDTHALER, under whose exertions $24,000 were raised, with the exception of $7,000 balance, which, during the entire week's services, it is anticipated, will be forthcoming.
